Stamp saving becoming unstuck

by JILL BETTNER

For almost 80 years, housewives on a budget, teen-agers on an allowance, new brides and the thrifty everywhere have been patiently licking billions of S&H Green Stamps, pasting them into books and saving, saving, saving.

Saving for a new can opener (4½ books), a hair dryer (5½ books) or some other appliance. Saving for a tennis racket (9 books), a set of golf clubs (22½ books) and even luxury items such as a raccoon coat (433 books) or a mini-motor home (4,198 books).

Anybody who has stopped saving the stamps for himself almost certainly is still saving for a friend or relative. Those of us who grew up in families where green stamps were considered almost as valuable as greenbacks wouldn't think of throwing them away — not even the mess all stuck together in the bottom of a kitchen drawer.

Everyone has enough green stamps lying around the house somewhere to fill at least one book despite the number of active savers (or at least redeemers) declining in recent years. Many stores just have stopped giving them away.

IT USED TO BE that many families planned nearly all their purchases around who gave green stamps, buying groceries at a certain store each week, getting gas at a special station and even arranging Saturday night bowling dates at "Green Stamp alleys."

In the last several years, however, businesses of all types quit offering the stamps for one reason or another.

Some dropped them to save the license fee S&H charged to use the stamps. Others simply decided to use the money they would have paid to S&H for other kinds of advertising and promotion.

One by one, National Tea Co. and other major food chain stores in the Chicago area dropped the stamps. Wieboldt's was the only one left where shoppers could still get a few of the once-mighty stamps with their change — until this year.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE of January, Wieboldt officials announced that they, too, would cease issuing the stamps and operating redemption centers in their 13 Chicago-area stores. Wieboldt's had participated in the S&H merchandising program since 1957.

Green stamps were no longer doing the job for Wieboldt's they were supposed to do, according to Arthur Muenze, president of Wieboldt Stores Inc.

"Since all food stores, most gas stations and other businesses had stopped giving the stamps away, public interest had declined to such an extent that offering them no longer was an effective method of bringing people into our stores," he said.

The redemption center in the basement of the Wieboldt's store at Randhurst Shopping Center, Mount Prospect, will close permanently March 31. The other North suburban center, in the Wieboldt's store in Evanston also will close on that date.

AS OF APRIL 1, green stamp savers in this area will have to travel to Elmwood Park to exchange their books of stamps for merchandise.

The Elmwood Park store, to be located at 7215 W. Grand Ave., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. The store, plus another center opening the same day in Chicago, are the first of several planned by the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. to fill the void created by Wieboldt's decision to close its centers.

An S&H spokesman said it still is impossible to say whether any future centers will be located in the Northwest suburbs. He said the additional redemption facilities will be announced "as fast as locations can be selected and leases negotiated."

THE COMPANY is concerned that some savers in this area appear to be under the mistaken impression that because Wieboldt stores are closing redemption cen-

Are green stamps licked?

A breath of spring, a bit early

It was a day for catching sunbeams, Friday, March 19, 1976.

If you're 5 years old and in kindergarten, you were running your winter-weary heart out on the school playground. Spring fever hits hardest on the young.

"I hope tomorrow will be summer," one child said. "I want to ride my two-wheeler," called back another.

The Northwest suburbs thumbed its nose at the next-to-last official day of winter Friday. Warm southwesterly winds pushed the temperature to the mid-70s by afternoon. The sun was a little friendlier, the sky a little higher.

The men who study these things said the warm weather will fade over the weekend. More clouds and maybe a shower are part of the picture, too.

Officially, Friday's high temperature of 75 degrees fell short of the record 78 for the date set in 1921. But that only mattered to bookkeepers.

For everybody else, Friday's weather was a first-place finish for winter and a welcome harbinger of spring.

A beauty!

A BASKETBALL, a boy and a warm sunny day spell relaxation for Dan Kessenich, an Arlington High School senior who took advantage of Friday's 75-degree weather to practice his jump shot.

State board acts

4th of July race card OK'd

by JOE SWICKARD

One day of Sunday racing for Arlington Park Race Track was approved unanimously Friday by the Illinois Racing Board.

The date, July 4, will be the only day of Sunday racing at the track.

The racing board's action echoes earlier action taken by the Arlington Heights Village Board this month in approving the holiday racing card.

The village board approved the one Sunday date in a series of unusual parliamentary procedures spanning two meetings.

AT THE FIRST hearing Feb. 16, the Sunday racing date was denied in three different motions. Trustees at that time expressed concern that approval of the request would set a precedent for demands for future Sunday dates. More than 20 residents also objected to the request because of concern about heavy traffic that is generated by the racetrack.

Trustee Alfred Barboro, who cast the decisive vote on the three motions, said the track would have to show a stronger tie-in with the village's Bicentennial celebration to receive the July 4 date.

At the next session of the village board March 2, track officials proposed a program that included a nine-race card, parades, music, picnic areas and fireworks displays. The featured July 4 race, the $100,000-to-$150,000-added American Derby, is the subject of negotiations between Arlington Park and CBS for national television broadcasting rights.

IN THEIR APPEARANCE before the village board, track officials said they would not seek any other Sunday racing dates, which are being allowed for the first time under revised state racing laws. The revised statutes require tracks to get local approval for Sunday racing either through municipal government action or by popular referendum.

Following the track officials' presentation of the proposed Bicentennial program, the village board approved the Sunday application. No objectors appeared at the board's second meeting to hear the request.

The village is expected to receive more than $3,500 from the single day of racing through the new 10-cent-per-person admission tax, which also was made part of the revised state racing laws.

The state racing board's action Friday formalizes the village board's approval for the July 4 date.

February food costs drop sharply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices increased at the lowest rate in four years during February as food costs took their sharpest drop since 1956, the Labor Dept. reported Friday.

The 0.1 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index compared to 0.4 per cent in January and a 0.6 per cent average for the last quarter of last year.

This put the index at 167.1, before seasonal adjustment, meaning that goods costing $100 in the 1967 base year went for $167.10 in February.

The February increase was the smallest since September 1971, the department said, and the 1.0 per cent drop in over-all food prices was the biggest downturn since 1956. Foods sold in grocery stores declined in price by 1.5 per cent, compared to a 0.4 per cent drop the previous month.

The February figures bore out predictions by administration economists that inflation would continue easing during the early months of this year, reflecting lower food costs and gradual effects of a sharp drop in overall wholesale prices over the last four months.

PRESIDENT FORD's press secretary, Ron Nessen, called the report by the Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Labor Statistics "excellent news" and "further evidence that the President's economic policy is working."

But he said, "At the same time I think we all feel a sense of caution. It will be difficult to have such a small increase each month."

The February figures showed that gasoline prices declined while charges for consumer services rose, although at a slower rate than in January.

Prices for some food, notably coffee, increased in February. Restaurant and quick-service meals increased at the same 0.3 per cent rate registered in January.

NONFOOD commodities increased 0.3 per cent, and clothing prices rose moderately.

Judge tells Hearst jury to 'pace' deliberations

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A jury Friday was given the task of deciding whether newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst acted of her own free will when she went into a bank with a gun and helped rob it of $10,690.

The case went to the jurors at 10:43 a.m. after legal instructions by U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The jurors deliberated for five hours and 15 minutes before adjourning for the night just before 5 p.m. They will resume at 9 a.m. Saturday.

In instructing the jurors, Carter told them to pace themselves so they did not become exhausted during the deliberations.

He ordered them to deliberate between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., including Saturday and Sunday, but said he would consider requests from them to continue their discussions into the evening if they wish.

In his instructions, Carter made these main points:

- It is up to the government to prove Miss Hearst is guilty.
- The presumption of innocence

alone is enough to acquit. The burden is always on the prosecution. It never shifts to the defendant.

- The key question is whether she acted under coercion and duress. If the jury determines that to be the case "You should acquit the accused."

- To bring in a guilty verdict the jury must decide that she is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, which he said must be "a doubt based on reason and common sense."

- The panel can consider the fact that Miss Hearst took the Fifth Amendment 42 times in determining her credibility. But he said they must judge her credibility in the same manner they weigh the testimony of other witnesses.

- Her intentional flight following the robbery is not sufficient proof for a conviction but neither is the fact of her original kidnapping sufficient to prove her innocence.

- The jury should ignore the punishment she will face if found guilty.

For charities' with race dates

Scott queried on political gift ban

by JOE SWICKARD

The Illinois Racing Board will seek an opinion from Illinois Atty. William Scott to determine whether officials of charity organizations holding racing dates are barred from political fundraising activities.

Racing board Chairman Anthony Scariano said Friday he received several inquiries from charity officials expressing concern that they had violated the state ban on political contributions from persons holding racing dates.

Scariano said the question is whether officers, directors and trustees of such groups as the United Fund and Sun-Times/Daily News Charities had either:

- Raised money or made contributions personally to candidates in the March 16 Illinois primary election and,
- If these actions would be in violation of state law.

Although the question was included on the racing board's agenda Friday, no action was taken pending more specific information from the charity groups and their officials.

Thefts connected to the ring have occurred in Des Plaines, Schaumburg, Mount Prospect, Libertyville, Mundelein and Addison. As many as six persons are expected to be arrested soon, investigators say.

2 buses crash; 10 students hurt

Ten high school students were slightly injured Friday when two school buses collided on Rand Road near Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights. The 10, students at Maine East High School, Park Ridge, were taken to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights. The buses were returning students from a field trip to Whitewater, Wis., when the accident occurred. The students were treated for minor injuries and released.

Scariano said while information is being gathered, the racing board will seek an opinion and clarification of the situation from the attorney general.

"SOMETHING HAS to be done about that statute," Scariano said, but declined to go further than to say that the board was looking for "clarification" from the attorney general.

He said the racing board would act once it had the information from the charities and the attorney general's opinion. That data should come within a week, he said.

Scariano said he would oppose the revocation of the charity racing dates if the groups' officials did involve themselves in a primary election.

THE QUESTION to be clarified by the attorney general is unrelated to a suit filed against the racing board by Michael owlett, Democratic candidate for governor. Motions concerning the Howlett suit are being heard in federal district court.

The suit concerns the racing board's planned investigation into a campaign loan to Howlett from a finance company owning race track stock.

Scandals related to the awarding of racing dates and the sale of race track stock rocked the state several years ago. The scandal eventually led to the conviction of Otto Kerner, a federal judge and a former Illinois governor for buying race track stock at reduced prices while in office.

Illinois Bell asks increase in rate for new wiring

Consumers will pay increased charges for Illinois Bell Telephone Co. installations that require new wiring if the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC) approves the utility's latest rate request.

Proposals for new installation charges and the elimination of some service plans were filed Thursday and Friday. The phone company's target date for installation changes is April 18.

The proposal includes a $6 charge for all telephone instrument work, plus $6 for each telephone outlet wired in residential installations. The current charge is $6 for installations where existing wiring is used and $9 where new wiring is used.

Illinois Bell said the proposed rates more accurately would reflect the cost of wiring service than current rates.

Illinois Bell said the new rates would net an estimated $19 million a year in added revenues, mostly from higher residential wiring charges.

A spokesman for the company said Illinois Bell filed an appeal in Sangamon County Circuit Court, Springfield, asking for a review of the ICC's Feb. 4 rate-increase decision.

The commission granted the company a rate-hike package to provide $70 million in additional annual income. The utility had asked for rate increases amounting to $186 million.

Dow unchanged in 2nd slowest session of year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Investors failed to respond to favorable economic news Friday and prices finished with little change in the second slowest trading day of the year on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which fluctuated throughout the day, closed unchanged at 979.85. It had been off more than four points at the outset and ahead around a point at noon. For the week, the Dow lost 7.79 points.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 0.13 to 100.58; the NYSE common stock index 0.06 to 53.76 and the average price of an NYSE common share 4 cents.

The market's breadth figures reflected investor uncertainty. Of the 1,880 issues crossing the tape, 726 declined, 684 advanced and 450 remained unchanged.

The volume of 18,000,000 shares was the slowest since 10,300,000 were traded Jan. 2. Turnover Friday totaled 20,330,000 shares.

"Investors are just taking a wait-and-see attitude right now," said Ralph Acampora, vice president of Smith, Barney, Harris, Upham. "Most are re-evaluating the gains made earlier this year."

He and other observers said investors apparently have discounted the news that the economy has begun a solid recovery from the worst recession since World War II.

U.S. to support Egypt's split with Russia: Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Friday hailed Egypt's break with Russia as a victory for U.S. foreign policy and pledged America would respond with economic and other aid for Cairo.

Defending his foreign policy in a meeting with newspaper editors at the White House, Ford said Egyptian President Anwar Sadat "just earlier this week cut off almost entirely his relations with the Soviet Union."

"This will be responded to by the U.S.A. economically and otherwise," he said.

Ford did not define "otherwise." But he is seeking congressional approval for the $39 million sale of six C130 military jet transports to Egypt.

Ford's words in an East Room question and answer session with members of the National Newspaper Association were his first in public on Sadat renouncing his nation's ties with Russia, for 20 years the chief arms supplier to Egypt.

An editor had asked Ford if detente — a word the President has tried to erase — had resulted in America giving away more than it got from Russia.

"Categorically untrue," Ford replied.

"If you look at where we have moved in foreign policy, I believe by any criterion we are ahead," the President said. He listed the foreign policy pluses as including:

- "We have peace."
- America's "major role in the Middle East . . . the great breakthrough" of the Israeli-Egyptian interim Sinai pact arranged in September by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

- "Around the world, we are in good shape," he said. Without mentioning the word "detente," Ford said, "The word doesn't mean anything but the process does and we're going to continue the process."

Ford prefaced the session by criticizing Congress for failure thus far to enact his call for a simple extension of the powers of the Federal Election Commission.

Noting that most of the commission's functions will halt Monday unless Congress has acted, the President said, "This Congress is still engaged in inexcusable and dangerous delay . . . Why can't the Congress act immediately?"

Failure to act before the Monday deadline, he said, "would create greater chaos and uncertainty" in the current elections season.

carried away. Policemen stormed the journalist's home Friday to remove the orphans from Becker's custody but were met by children swinging red-hot poker heated in the cottage fireplace. The raid came at the request of Danish welfare officials who said Becker was not giving the children proper care and schooling.

The nation

Reagan says he won't quit

Ronald Reagan insisted Friday he would not quit the presidential race, vowing to listen to "the people, not the politicians." Several Republican governors, including North Carolina Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., Ford's campaign coordinator in the South, Friday urged Reagan to bow out and join forces with Ford, but Reagan immediately replied that he would not. Reagan, who has lost five primaries to Ford and goes against him again in North Carolina Tuesday, said he feels he has a chance to carry his campaign to the Republican National Convention in Kansas City despite the losses.

Voters will accept southerner: Carter

Georgian Jimmy Carter said Friday the nation has undergone a "profound change" and finally is willing to accept a southerner as President. Carter, front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, said that for the first time in 100 years a southern candidate is not saddled with the stigma of "sectional biases." Carter was on the second of a two-day swing through the state, completing his campaign in advance of Tuesday's North Carolina primary.

Ford nominates ambassador to Liberia

President Ford Friday nominated W. Beverly Carter, a diplomat who reportedly damaged his career by helping ransom American hostages in Africa, to be ambassador to Liberia. Senate confirmation would pluck Carter from diplomats' limbo and send him back to Africa where, a year ago, he broke a cardinal policy rule with a humanitarian gesture that infuriated Sec. of State Henry Kissinger. Carter, a black, was ambassador to Tanzania in May, 1975, when guerrillas from neighboring Zaire raided a Tanzanian animal study center and captured three young American students and a Dutch colleague.

Flu epidemic begins to wane

The nation's most extensive influenza epidemic in eight years has started to wane after claiming the lives of at least 2,321 persons, the National Center for Disease Control said Friday. Despite the decline in the number of influenza cases, however, the center said deaths attributed to pneumonia and influenza reported from 121 major U.S. cities rose slightly during the week ended March 13 to 552 deaths. The current flu strain, A-Victoria, has hit in all of the 50 states.

Talks collapse in Rhodesia

Premier Ian Smith and black nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo announced Friday their talks on handing over power to the black majority in Rhodesia had collapsed. Nkomo warned that the future of Rhodesia was "too ghastly to contemplate." "We have had lengthy discussions and a considerable amount of work has been done over a period of months," Smith and Nkomo said in a joint statement. "We have now reached an impasse and are therefore breaking off the talks. This will provide an opportunity for consultation and consideration." Nkomo, who is considered a moderate black leader, told a news conference after the breakdown of the three-month-old talks that Smith's viewpoint was "racial and contemptuous."

Air collision cause unknown

Air Canada said Friday no cause had been determined for the mid-air collision Thursday of a DC8 jetliner, on lease to Cubana Airlines, and a small, Russian-built twin engine jet near Havana. A spokesman said there were unconfirmed reports that five persons aboard the Russian jet were killed.

Ships wait; Panama Canal blocked

A "sick-out" by 700 American employees of the Panama Canal Friday tied up some 175 ships in transit, making it the most massive backlog in the history of the 51-mile waterway. At least 33 vessels were scheduled to arrive Friday, adding to 131 already clustered at the Atlantic and Pacific entrances to the canal. Eight other vessels sat idle in Gatun Lake, near the Atlantic side, unable to move for lack of tug service.

Syrian peacemaker calls for vengeance

Premier unharmed in bombing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Premier Rashid Karami Friday escaped unharmed from a rocket attack on a jet he was boarding for takeoff for Damascus. An outraged Syrian peacemaker said he would "chop off the hands" of those responsible.

Renewed killing sprees in the capital and in the Mount Lebanon area left at least 33 persons dead in a day-long series of clashes between right-wing Christian forces and Moslem "leftists," police sources said.

An incendiary rocket slammed into the rear of a Soviet-built YAK-40 just as Karami and former Premier Saeb Salam boarded the three-engine jet, parked in a Lebanese air base adjacent to Beirut's International Airport.

The politicians scrambled to safety with other members of their party and ran for cover. The departure of the aircraft to Damascus had been delayed due to the late arrival of Parliamentary speaker Kamel Assad.

The Syrian pilot said later that another rocket had hit the ground near the plane before the second round hit the aircraft and set the rear section ablaze. Clouds of choking black smoke poured from the rear stair-case and one foot diameter hole torn in the fuselage.

The Syrian-backed Saiga guerrilla organization said that a Lebanese soldier carried out the attack. It said the soldier fired three rounds from a machinegun into the plane, setting one of its engines on fire.

But witnesses reported hearing no machinegun fire and the hole in the fuselage was clearly made by a small rocket.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam described the rocketing of the plane as a "conspiracy against Lebanon, Syria and all the Arabs."

"We will chop off the hands of the conspirators," Khaddam said in a telephone conversation with Parliament Speaker Assad.

Syrian President Hafez Assad had summoned the politicians for another attempt at negotiating an agreement to end the 11-month-long civil war in Lebanon.

Kamel Assad said the politicians' trip to Damascus would be postponed.

Saiga did not say which faction of the army allegedly carried out the attack but observers pointed out that Lt. Ahmed Khatib's Moslem leftist "Lebanese Arab Army" is the only army faction currently opposing the Syrian peace initiative. A number of Khatib's men are stationed near the airport.

Jury urged to 'pace' deliberations

and should not be concerned with who "wins or loses."

• If the jurors determine Miss Hearst is guilty of armed bank robbery, they may consider the second charge of using a firearm in commission of a felony. If they find her innocent of the robbery, she must be found innocent of both charges.

The tension of the 39-day trial took its toll on Miss Hearst's mother, Catherine, who has sat, with composure, in a front row spectator seat at the trial sessions since Jan. 26.

Shortly before Carter began his instructions she began crying and dabbing at her eyes. After about an hour, she got up and left the courtroom in tears.

Her husband, Randolph, who has also sat through the entire trial, said of his wife's breakdown, "It's just that it's the end of the line."

Miss Hearst, however, looked better and acted with more animation than at any time during the past two months, obviously glad to have the trial over with.

DURING THE HOURS the jury is deliberating, Miss Hearst will stay in a holding area one floor above the 19th floor jury room in the federal courthouse. At night she will be driven back to the San Mateo County Jail where she has been held since her arrest six months ago.

Defense attorney Albert Johnson said either one of her attorneys or a member of her family would stay with her at all times while she is in the holding cell.

The jury's initial deliberation session lasted for an hour and a half before breaking for lunch at a nearby restaurant.

The members of the panel who will decide Miss Hearst's fate are a cross section of middle America — among them a dental assistant, a retired army officer, a receptionist, a postman, a stewardess, three housewives, an airline mechanic.

After the morning session, chief defense lawyer F. Lee Bailey and the government prosecutor, U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr., held a joint news conference at which they were on an amiable basis in contrast to some heated clashes at the trial.

Browning was asked what the government would do if there was a hung jury and Carter had to declare a mistrial.

"I can't answer that," he said. "The question of a retrial would depend largely on what the (numerical) split was among the jurors."

Bailey said he did not know of anything left out of his case that could have helped Miss Hearst.

"THERE WILL ALWAYS be a controversy. There will always be those who are dissatisfied with a conviction and those who are dissatisfied with an acquittal," Bailey said.

Browning said there was always a question in a lawyer's mind of whether you should have done something differently if you had it to do over again.

Miss Hearst, whether convicted or acquitted, still faces charges in Los Angeles of kidnaping and assault with a deadly weapon.

Asked if he would represent her in a Los Angeles trial, Bailey said, "I signed on for all charges against her."

Millionaire's daughters OK after 'abduction' by father

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two young daughters of millionaire Pittsburgh banker Seward Prosser Mellon, pawns in a custody battle between their parents, were abducted Friday from their mother's Brooklyn hideaway. Hours later, Mellon told police in a telephone conversation that he had the children and they were safe and well.

Catherine Leigh Mellon, 7, and her sister, Constance Elizabeth, 5, were taken away from an armed bodyguard by three fast-talking men, one of whom reportedly said he was an FBI agent.

The abduction took place outside their home in the Bath Bay section of Brooklyn. Deputy Chief Anthony Voelker, commander of Brooklyn detectives, said police, an FBI agent and Mellon's attorneys spoke with Mellon for 15 minutes in a four-way telephone conversation, but authorities were unable to trace the call.

"Mr. Mellon said his children were with him — he wouldn't disclose where — and they were safe," he said.

Thousands attend Visconti's funeral

• Thousands of mourners attended the funeral Friday of Luciano Visconti, the Communist count who directed some of postwar Italy's best and most controversial films. Visconti died Wednesday of heart failure. He was 69. Among the mourners were Italian President Giovanni Leone and Communist Party leader Enrico Berlinguer, actors Burt Lancaster, Vittorio Gassman and Helmut Berger.

• Queen Elizabeth's husband, Prince Philip, roared with laughter Friday when he tried to pin a wings badge on the bemedaled chest of a U.S. Army pilot. He could not find a space to put them. "Good heavens, where am I expected to find room for these wings?" the Prince said as he searched for space among the medals and U.S. Pilot's wings on the chest of Capt. Mike Fitzgerald, from Baraboo, Wis.

• The grueling pace of world competition is over for Dorothy Hamill, whose flashing skates earned her an Olympic gold medal and a world championship, but the rewards continue unabated. Mrs. Betty Ford was to present the 19-year-old from Riverside, Conn., with the National Women's Republican Club outstanding young woman of the year award today, in New York City. It appeared likely Hamill would be extended a formal invitation to visit the White House at a later date.

• Pope Paul VI Friday greeted a crowd of more than 10,000 persons who made a St. Joseph's Day pilgrimage to St. Peter's Square. The Pope spoke briefly from his study window overlooking the sun-bathed square where ice cream vendors did brisk business. Recalling that Pope Pius IX had conferred the title of patron of the Roman Catholic Church on St. Joseph in 1870, the pontiff invoked him as protector of all Christian families and of the world's work "guided by justice and by liberty."

Ask Andy

Novocaine—a numbing experience

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's Yearbook of Science and the Future to Brian DeWeese, 12, of Gallup, N.M., for his question:

HOW DOES NOVOCAINE MAKE THINGS NUMB?

In the world of medicine, an anesthetic is a drug given to eliminate or greatly reduce pain. In major surgery, a general anesthetic is usually administered to numb the entire body. For minor operations, involving only a small portion of the body, a local anesthetic, such as novocaine, does the job. It only numbs the area where pain might be experienced.

Novocaine is a miraculous synthetic drug used in medical and dental surgery to numb a particular area of the body. It is the trade name for Procaine and was introduced into common usage in 1905 by Alfred Einhorn. Before novocaine, cocaine was frequently used, but its habit-forming characteristics were considered undesirable for general use.

Novocaine is injected into the tissues of the area to be numbed. The amount used depends on the size of the area being operated on and the amount of time needed to perform the surgery. Following the injection, a short period of time lapses before complete numbness occurs. What happens is that the novocaine interferes with the nervous activity of the tissues, rendering the nerve endings, which communicate pain to the brain, insensitive. Actually, the nerve endings are paralyzed for a short time, but this paralysis rarely leaves any permanent or damaging effects.

Dentists use novocaine frequently when treating a tooth. When a cavity is being repaired, for example, the dentist will administer novocaine if the sensitive nerves of the tooth might be affected during the preparation for the filling. The numbness the patient experiences usually lasts a few hours, but this slight inconvenience is well worth the freedom from pain that novocaine provides.

Pharmacology is the science of drugs and their effects on living things. It is a relatively recent science, closely related to biology and chemistry. Through continual research and experimentation, scientists in these fields are developing new drugs to better serve mankind. Novocaine is an example of modern man's success in this area.

How easy it is to take modern medicine for granted. It is difficult to imagine life without such miraculous drugs as penicillin, the Salk and Sabin polio vaccines and novocaine. Before the 1800s anesthetics to relieve pain during surgery were risky and limited. We can thank modern science for our countless lifesaving and pain-relieving remedies.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Michael Tomasco, 12, of Stratford, Conn., for his question:

HOW DOES A LASER BEAM OPERATE?

The word laser stands for light amplification by stimulated emission or radiation. A laser produces a thin beam of light so powerful it can burn a hole in a diamond—nature's hardest material. The light emitted by a laser is different from light produced by other sources such as electric bulbs. For one thing, instead of traveling in all directions, this narrow beam of light remains almost parallel. A beam 1/4-inch wide, for example, spreads to only about 1/4 of an inch after traveling a distance of 1,000 feet.

The unique characteristics of laser light make it an extremely versatile tool in numerous areas. In medicine, a surgeon can use the beam to remove diseased tissue, such as may occur in the eye. In industry, a laser beam, reaching 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit, can melt extremely hard materials. A laser produces a highly directional beam and operates at a much higher frequency than do electronic transmitters. For these reasons, a laser beam has great advantages in communications. One of these beams, for example, can transmit many telephone calls or television programs at the same time.

Contested races dominate April 10 school elections

All but two school districts in the Northwest suburbs will have contested board-of-education elections April 10 — making 1976 one of the most active election years for schools in recent years.

Both community college districts and all four area high school districts became contested Friday, the last day for the filing of nominating petitions.

Only Des Plaines Dist. 62, which serves central Des Plaines, and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, which serves Prospect Heights and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, will have uncontested elementary school elections.

School closings, teacher cutbacks, enrollment declines and financial deficits have been topics for discussion in most local school districts this year. These and other issues have prompted a number of candidacies.

The following names will appear on the ballot in April:

• Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15: Incumbent Irene Sjostedt of Hoffman Estates and newcomer E. Eric Jones of Palatine, for one 1-year unexpired seat; incumbent Leland Gibbs of Rolling Meadows and newcomers Patsy Kelly, Ann Koller and Norman

Knapp, all of Palatine, for two 3-year seats.

• Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21: Incumbents Barbara Farr and Kenneth Rodeck, of Wheeling, and Steven Greenberg of Arlington Heights and newcomers Elaine Bond, Fred Harms, Linda Sprechman, all of Arlington Heights, James Gallagher of Wheeling and Barbara Floyd of Buffalo Grove, for three 3-year seats.

• Prospect Heights Dist. 23: Incumbents Sallyann Okuno of Prospect Heights and Alan Krinsky of Arlington Heights, for two 3-year seats.

• Arlington Heights Dist. 57: Incumbents Edith Jolly, Donald Gibbins of Arlington Heights and newcomers James Foster, Douglas Chidley, both of Arlington Heights, and Sharon Warner of Mount Prospect, for three, 3-year terms.

• River Trails Dist. 26: Incumbents William Haase and Peggy Golden, and newcomer Patrick Fauceglia, all of Mount Prospect, for two 3-year seats.

• Schaumburg Township Dist. 54: Incumbents Edward Bedard and Gordon Thoren, both of Hoffman Estates; and newcomers Leslie Kleiman, Nick Rizzo, Norman Katz, all of Hoffman

Estates, Mary Lund, Claudia Bartholomew, Isidore Smith, Dennis Waits, all of Schaumburg, Arlene Czajkowski of Roselle, Elizabeth Carpenter of Hanover Park, for three 3-year terms. Newcomer John Morrow of Hoffman Estates filed incomplete candidate papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

• Mount Prospect Dist. 57: Incumbents Martha Rotelli, David Kludal, and Peter Olesen and newcomers George Montalbano and Eugene Bradtko, all of Mount Prospect, for three 3-year terms.

• Elk Grove Township Dist. 58: Incumbents Emil Bahnmajer of Mount Prospect, Judith Zanca of Des Plaines and Erwin Poklaciak of Arlington Heights; and newcomer Charles B. Canupp Jr. of Elk Grove Village, for three 3-year terms.

• Des Plaines Dist. 62: Incumbent Richard Birchfield and newcomer James N. Kosmond, both of Des Plaines, for two 3-year terms.

• East Maine Dist. 63: Incumbent Larry Reiss of Morton Grove and newcomers Roberta Morris of Park Ridge, Ann Sostrin of Morton Grove, Richard Smith of Niles, and Jeannette Oestreich of Morton Grove, for three 3-year terms.

• Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96: Incumbents Clarke Walser and Linaya Back, both of Buffalo Grove, Louis Lundstedt Jr. of Long Grove and newcomer William G. Papke Jr. of Buffalo Grove, for three, 3-year terms. Newcomers Wayne R. Banasik and Jerry R. Parkin, both of Buffalo Grove, for one, 1-year term.

• High School Dist. 125: Incumbent Edward Smith of Buffalo Grove and newcomers Brenda B. Weis and Larry Managh both of Lincolnshire, Conrad Thorne of Buffalo Grove, Francis L. Wolowic and Lorenz C. Schmidt, both of Mundelein for two 3-year terms. Newcomer Charles J. Klinger of Lincolnshire, filed incomplete candidacy papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

• High School Dist. 207: Incumbents Anne Evans of Des Plaines and Roy Makela of Niles; and newcomers Arlynn Warmack of Morton Grove, Thomas Rueckert of Glenview and Earl Wilson of Niles, for three 3-year terms.

• High School Dist. 211: Incumbent Robert Creek of Inverness; and newcomers Richard Gillette and Glenn Hargrave, both of Palatine, for two 3-year terms.

• High School Dist. 214: In-

Linda Diener-Joseph Strezishar

One of the first things Joseph Strezishar did when he stepped onto the ground Jan. 5 after living 36 days atop a pole to raise funds to fight muscular dystrophy was to surprise Linda Bernice Diener with an engagement ring.

Although Joe spent both the Christmas and New Year holidays on the pole, Valentine's Day found him repeating marriage vows with Linda before a six-foot heart in the Des Plaines home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Diener. Joe is the son of Mrs. Ray DeBacker, Wheeling, and Jack Strezishar, Des Plaines.

The 6 p.m. candlelight, double ring service was followed by a reception, also in the Diener home, where a heart-shaped cake, complete with music box, red hearts, white doves and a water fountain, was served to the 60 guests.

FOR HER WEDDING Linda wore a beige voile gown trimmed in lace, and carried red roses with baby's breath. Matron of honor was Linda Bander, Villa Park, and flower girl was the bride's 6-year-old sister, Joeline. Mrs. Bander wore a red and white dotted swiss gown and carried white roses and baby's breath while Joeline wore a pink gown with white lace overskirt and carried a basket of rose petals.

Best man was Herman Edelson, Des Plaines. Also taking part in the ceremony were the bride's mother, who sang, and her sister, Teresa, who played the guitar and also sang. The groom's father played the accordion and sang at the reception.

The new Mrs. Strezishar is a '73 graduate of Maine East High, and the groom from Loyola Academy, Wilmette. He is employed in Wilmette by Homer's Ice Cream. Until her marriage Linda worked at Brookwood Nursing Home, Des Plaines.

The newlyweds are living in a Des Plaines apartment.

Changes in diet may aid irritable colon

I have had diarrhea off and on for eight years. The tests show a spastic colon. I am tense because nothing stays in me. I am a highly nervous person, but I have diarrhea even if my nerves are relaxed. They have treated me with different things but it doesn't work. I have sharp pains and burning and fluttering throughout my intestines. Can you please advise me? I am only 35 but feel 50 most of the time.

Stop coffee in all forms, including the decaffeinated type. Do not use tea, colas or other caffeine containing beverages. Temporarily you might avoid all forms of soda beverages. Not because they contain soda, but because some of them that you might not suspect contain caffeine that may stimulate the nervous system. Stop smoking cigarettes if you use any at all.

Do start eating bulk-containing foods, particularly those containing bran. These are the whole wheat products. You can use All Bran, bran buds or any other sources of whole wheat fiber that you can get. Shredded wheat products are also whole wheat. Keep in mind that you may have gas and symptoms for the first two to three weeks when you increase the cereal fiber in your diet. You may need to do this gradually to keep from causing too many symptoms.

Stop all milk and milk products and do not use foods that use any appreciable amounts of milk in their preparation such as milk gravies, cream pies, ice cream and milk — containing sherbets.

After following this regime for a while if your situation straightens out you can try milk products and see if you are able to tolerate them. If you are, you could add them to your normal diet so you will be getting enough calcium. These simple points listed above will go a long way toward helping many people who have the spastic colon problem.

Diarrhea often is part of the problem of an irritable colon. Those who want more information on spastic colon can send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 2-1, Irritable or Spastic Colon and Constipation. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Can you please give me information on dextrocardia with situs inversus. Is it true that the heart on the right side is weaker and that the child usually dies at birth?

Negative. All that diagnosis means is that the internal organs of the body are arranged in a mirror image of the normal arrangement. That is, the things that are supposed to be on the right side are on the left side and vice versa. This can be the only abnormality with a perfectly normal heart and normal abdominal organs. Such individuals may live a perfectly normal life span.

Sometimes when this variation occurs, there will be accompanying birth defects. If there are, whether or not they will affect the health of the individual depends on what defects are present and how serious these defects are. If it is an ordinary garden variety type of heart defect that can be completely corrected with a simple operation, then the outlook is usually good.

Keep tax records five years accountants say

Dear Dorothy: We're in the midst of figuring our income taxes, and our files are overflowing. How long do you have to keep receipts from stores — also canceled checks?—Mrs. S. Palaisa

This is a question that arises often this time of year. One reason is that there is often conflicting advice given. The IRS recommends keeping records for a minimum of three years because the service can audit accounts in that time span. Many accountants, however, say it's a good idea to keep records for five years. After that, it's filing nonsense.

Dear Dorothy: I've been trying to do my part by using recycled paper. But everything I've found strikes me as dull and rough. Is this what we're in for the duration?—Pamela Hoerner

The technology will improve, as it does in almost everything. Some of the newer recycled paper is handsome — smooth and even elegant.

Dear Dorothy: My grandmother used to make a fantastic cottage cheese strudel, the recipe of which has been lost through the years. Can you (or a reader) help me out?—Nancy Davis

Let's open this to volunteers. It may be because we've become so calorie-conscious, but I can't recall seeing the delicious home-made strudels so evident in years past. Even now, I drool a little over those great apple strudels of my youth. A true art.

Dear Dorothy: What is the difference between activated charcoal or regular charcoal?—Cynthia Parrish Activated charcoal has been treated so that it has many more passageways than regular charcoal to absorb odors.

Dear Dorothy: Reading about the troubles with bubble gum prompts me to send you the solution quickly. It may sound unbelievable, but the best way to remove gum from hair (I have three children) and from washable items is to rub in peanut butter. In some miraculous way, peanut butter dissolves the gum.

Recently, a polyester jumper looked as if it was ruined and I decided to rub liberally with peanut butter and then used a presoak spray to eliminate the oil spot. The jumper is back in use. From now on, don't cut off bubble-gummed hair or run for ice cubes. Run for the peanut butter.—Betty Miller

Dear Dorothy: With spring cleaning about to zoom in, I urge everyone to get a good squeegee for windows. All one has to do is wipe the blade with a crumpled newspaper or paper towel after each pass. I bought a squeegee last year and my husband never fussed for one minute about the window-cleaning chore. Matter of fact, I think he half-liked it.—Georgia Whitley

The way we see it

Howlett should endorse probe

Michael Howlett's efforts to thwart an Illinois Racing Board investigation into a personal loan is a bad start for his gubernatorial campaign.

The day after the March 16 primary, the secretary of state filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court. He asked the court to order a halt to the probe into a $100,000 loan Howlett received from National Acceptance Corp., a firm which owns racetrack stock.

Trying to stop the investigation on the grounds it is politically motivated creates the impression that Howlett has something to hide. He requests an "impartial" fact-finder to conduct an inquiry, but he simply cannot make a good case that Anthony Scariano, the widely respected chairman of the racing board, is unable to conduct a good investigation.

During the primary campaign, Howlett frequently refused to explain adequately his finances. The loan from a company with racetrack stock does not cease to be questionable just because the primary election is now history.

The investigation into Howlett's loan should proceed, and Howlett should finally answer questions about his relationship with Sun Steel Co. If Howlett has nothing to hide, these explanations will help assure voters that there are no unpleasant secrets about his affairs that the voters deserve to know.

Then the campaign between Howlett and Republican James R. Thompson can proceed on the issue of who can do the better job of running the state, without the pall of Howlett's finances muddying other issues.

MICHAEL J. HOWLETT

Two wise judge picks

You may have missed it in the flurry of election returns, but Illinois voters have moved to keep the highest court in Illinois out of the hands of Richard J. Daley.

Although only 88 per cent of the votes have been tallied, William G. Clark has been nominated to the Illinois Supreme Court, and James A. Dooley appears to have been nominated to the second seat.

The losers were Henry W. Dieringer and, apparently, Joseph A. Power, both closely associated with Daley. If they had been nominated to the court, there was the obvious peril the court could tend to become a partisan tool for Daley's benefit.

The court is going to face a variety of issues (such as home rule) in the next few years that will touch on Daley's needs in Chicago. Men of the abilities and independence of Clark and Dooley are needed to handle those cases; political cronies who might compromise justice aren't.

Illinois' Democratic voters can be pleased with Tuesday's Supreme Court nominations. Courts are supposed to be unbiased interpreters of the law. They need men of the caliber of Dooley and Clark to uphold that integrity.

Out, out, damned spot!

She opposes alternative school

The proposed concept for an "alternative school" by Dist. 59 is an irresponsible and unconscionable attempt to brainwash concerned parents into thinking that a return to a "basic" or "traditional" school would be terrible and that we should be satisfied with what we have. When you are given a choice between freedom and prison, there is only one reasonable conclusion.

The kind of alternative to education that was given sounded like something out of an 18th century novel. Reformatories have a more liberally structured program than the pitiful example of a "structured" school that was proposed to us, despite all the claims of letting parents decide the actual format of the school.

I am really very disappointed and I even question the competency of the committee who put this proposal together. If after one year of research this is their objective and reasonable alternative to our present school system, they are either completely oblivious to what parents are asking for, or they have intentionally tried to mislead us. Do these "education experts" really think that parents are that gullible? I believe this presentation of an alternative school was purposely designed and calculated to produce a negative response from parents. (An interesting psychological experiment in "word stimulus.") However, it has succeeded in making the administration look as though they have really made an attempt to investigate the possibility of an alternative school, if the question is ever asked again. The paradox is that this issue has only called more attention to the fact that schools are not giving the kind of education our children deserve. Many parents are finding out that they are not alone in wanting to see academic excellence achieved, morals and values and standards enforced and other ideas like discipline, respect and courtesy reinstated.

Yes, I am for "traditional schools"! Schools like John Marshall in California and Prince George County schools in Maryland, where children enjoy their learning experiences and come away with basics to either continue their education, or go on to lead full and successful lives. Frankly, I am tired of the "experts" in the field of education — and psychologists — presuming to think they know what is best for my children. I am tired of trying to figure out what an "A" means on a report card. Is it for academic excellence or is there a tolerance of 50 per cent either way, depending on how the child is exerting himself. I'm tired of hearing how a child must not feel like a failure, how he can only achieve if he feels successful.

Consequently, standards of achievement are raised or lowered so they are relevant to the child. For sure, this theory will never produce any failures, but at the same time, a child will never know the satisfaction of earning an "A" for excellent work. I'm tired of reading curriculum that suggests the use of psychological techniques in the classroom (role playing, magic circles, psycho-dramas, all-about-me diaries, group reflexivity, etc.) when the children have never been diagnosed as needing such treatment, nor has the teacher been licensed or taught to evaluate such techniques. I'm tired of hearing educators say that a child does not need to search for a goal today, but he must search for a role, an identity. Who is going to support all these role seekers when they grow up without any ambitions or aspirations?

The latest deception in the field of education concerns the national S.A.T.'s. Now the "experts" are saying that kids today are much smarter than they were 10 years ago, but these standard tests do not ask the right questions to define the achievement of today's students. What this poor excuse really means is: kids know everything about drugs, sex, the problems with democracy, pollution, abortion, marriage and a myriad of other "relevant" issues, but they can't read, write, spell, comprehend, or compute simple mathematics!

Education used to foster the intellectual development of a child by providing essential basic skills so that he could seek systematic knowledge. Today, it seems the purpose of education is to use the child as a means to change society, to modify behavior. The question is: to modify to WHAT?

Children deserve the right to read, spell, comprehend and talk, using the English language correctly. To be able to do basic mathematics without the use of fingers or calculators. What employer will hire a person who has learned how to be "relevant," "life-adjusted" or how to think about his "role"?

T. H. Bell, U.S. commissioner of education, has said: "Parents have the ultimate responsibility for the upbringing of their children and their desires should take precedence. The school's authority ends where it infringes on this parental right." Parents have a right to demand and get quality education. If a "basic" school is the answer, to the majority, then that is what it should be. But, it certainly is not the kind of "traditional school" that Dist. 59 proposes. If, after one year, this is what our district panel of "experts" have come up with, perhaps it is time parents do a little "modifying" of their own. We have the right to put credible people in office or positions when the minds of our children are at stake.

'Don't expand our airport'

The village boards of Hanover Park, Streamwood, and Roselle, representing a combined population of 47,000 residents, have all passed resolutions against future expansion of the Schaumburg airport. The SSAFE organization has collected over 1,600 petitions against the airport expansion. Why does Schaumburg continue with a plan that its neighbors consider detrimental to their health, welfare and safety? Doubling the number of yearly operations at a VFR airport will double the safety risk and frequency of unnecessary noise to a region that is primarily residential. Rather than spending so much time and money on 124 pilots, Schaumburg would be wiser to improve its roads to the benefit of its 36,900 residents.

Berry's World

by DOROTHY MEYER

My horoscope on the day of this week's primary election was, "Information coming in is garbled or wrong; doublecheck your facts." Normally this wouldn't bother me because my kids and other loved ones have been putting me on for years — but I was manning a phone in the newsroom Tuesday night, taking election results from reporters on the scene.

That is not the time to be receiving information that is garbled or wrong.

It is also not the time to be asking a reporter, "Are you sure this information is not garbled or wrong," because election night for newsmen is like this:

THE TOWER OF BABEL was actually election headquarters with only one telephone.

The Age of Chivalry is dead because it was trampled to death one election night when a female reporter thought she could use that phone first.

Dorothy Meyer's column

The Montague and Capulet feud started when Mr. Montague printed an unkind remark about Capulet in his Stratford-on-Avon Herald, and then tried to get precinct totals from Capulet on election night.

Crazy Legs Hirsch got his training in broken-field running in a news room, taking vote totals from someone like me at a telephone to the ladies with the adding machines to the copy machine to the news writers.

The doctor who wrote that modesty ruins more kidneys than alcohol does should have put "working for a newspaper on election night" before "modesty."

Thus, when a breathless reporter with his kidneys in a bind called in some precinct totals to me and I said, "I hope this information is not garbled or wrong, let me double-check these facts," he became somewhat profane.

"LISTEN, DUM DUM," he said when he quit swearing and caught his breath, "there's eight guys in back of me waiting to use this phone and they're gonna garble my farble real good if I don't get off the horn so shut up and get those totals to Crazy Legs."

In our office on election night this year, Crazy Legs was a she because she got trampled once on the way to a phone at election headquarters and swore she'd never go out there again. However, a Crazy Legs job is not tranquil either and when I told the nice lady, "This information may be garbled or wrong, let me try to double check my facts," she yelled, "Garble schmearble, I'll give you such a doublecheck your ears will be ringing but so is your phone so answer it."

So I did and it was Mr. Montague calling from the Tower of Babel. His information was indeed garbled because Capulet was still mad at him and was sitting on the vote tally out of spite.

It was nice that the next day was St. Patrick's Day — it gave all of us here an excuse for looking kind of green.

Regional finals today in NCAA basketball tourney

The game college basketball fans have been waiting for will be played Saturday at Baton Rouge, La., when top-ranked Indiana meets second-ranked Marquette for the NCAA Midwest regional championship, and oddly enough, it's the only final pairing that was expected.

DePaul, Notre Dame and Nevada-Las Vegas were supposed to reach the finals of their respective regionals, but each was beaten Thursday night, leaving the final pairings of the East, Midwest and Far West regionals something less than what the NCAA had in mind.

Third-ranked Rutgers is still alive in the East regionals at Greensboro, N.C., but the Scarlet Knights' opponent will be VMI, as dark a horse as you could find in this tournament, instead of highly-regarded DePaul. VMI defeated DePaul in overtime, 71-66, Thursday night while Rutgers was running past Connecticut, 89-79, for its 30th victory in a row.

In the Midwest regional at Louisville, Ky., it will be ninth-ranked Michigan, which topped Notre Dame 80-76, against 11th-ranked Missouri, which defeated Texas Tech, 84-75. When that regional began the experts were predicting a final between 10th-ranked Washington and Notre Dame. Washington was beaten by Missouri in the first round of the tournament.

The Far West regional at Los Angeles will pit defending NCAA champion and fifth-ranked UCLA against 12th-ranked Arizona, and that one too is a surprise. UCLA, which outlasted Pepperdine 70-61 Thursday night, was expected to reach the final but not Arizona. Fans were hoping for a showdown between UCLA and fourth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, which had lost just one game entering the tourney, but Arizona upset the Rebels, 114-108, in overtime.

Many believe, however, that no matter which teams reach the finals at Philadelphia, March 29, that game will be anti-climatic to the Indiana-Marquette contest Saturday.

Both teams had trouble in their regional semifinal games Thursday night, with Indiana squeezing by Alabama, 74-69, and Marquette edging Western Michigan, 62-57.

There is little to choose between the two teams. Indiana, unbeaten in 29 games, is the more physical team but Marquette, which has lost just once in 28 starts, has an edge in quickness. Both teams play tight, aggressive defense.

"They're No. 1 and there is no doubt about it," said Al McGuire, coach of Marquette. "Indiana is dynamite. There is no question about it."

McGuire was not very pleased with his team's performance against Western Michigan, however.

"If Indiana isn't asleep now, they will never sleep after watching our game with Western Michigan," said McGuire.

In the East regional, Rutgers is favored to defeat VMI and reach the Final Four for the first time ever. It has been proven that the best way to play Rutgers is to slow the game down and not let the Scarlet Knights run their blistering fast break, and VMI is a far more cautious team than Connecticut.

VMI coach Bill Blair professes to be as surprised as everyone else at his team's survival in post-season play.

"We're here. Don't ask me how we're here, but we're here," he said. "Physically, we don't match up well with anybody. We don't match up with Rutgers — they press for 40 minutes. I don't know if we have enough players to last 40 minutes.

"But my team is made up of very intelligent kids. They play good basic basketball, setting up picks and waiting for good shots. Our kids have a lot of confidence in their offense. We have the shooters. We have kids who can stick it in the hole."

UCLA, which has won 19 of the last 22 NCAA basketball titles, is the choice to defeat Arizona in the Far West regional, especially since the game is being played on the Bruins' home court, Pauley Pavilion.

"I really want to get to Philadelphia," said Gene Bartow, who succeeded the legendary John Wooden this year. "This team has got it all and if we can just put it together we could go all the way."

Four schools remain in AA title fight

The four quarterfinal games of the Illinois state Class AA basketball tournament more than lived up to their billing Friday in Champaign.

For some teams, like the Thornridge Falcons, the script could have read a little better.

The Falcons were given a good shot at repeating their double state title performance of the early 1970s but were stunned by a quick and aggressive West Aurora squad, 82-52.

Decatur-Eisenhower overcame some sloppy play to advance to the semifinals over Marion, 81-66.

West Aurora, owner of a 24-game winning streak, will meet Eisenhower in today's first semi-final game at 12:15 p.m.

But while the afternoon games were routs the evening matchups were the stuff of state championship legend.

Morgan Park, champions of the Chicago Public League, used the brilliance of all-star Levi Cobb to hold off a fired up Galesburg quintet 53-48.

The final meeting of the night, between Loyola Academy and Oak Park, was so exciting they decided to play an extra period.

The Oak Park Huskies then used some clutch free throw shooting in the overtime period to escape with a 56-53 victory.

The win sent the Huskies into today's second semi-final game against Morgan Park at 1:45 p.m.

With defending state champ Phillips eliminated early, as well as the other top prep powers such as East Leyden and Peoria Richwoods, the state title was considered anybody's prize.

The quarterfinal games Friday only proved that today's semi-final and final games will be among the most exciting in the tournament's history.

Here's how the quarterfinal games went Friday:

Thornridge shocked

West Aurora's super sticky defense and super sizzling shooting swamped No. 5 ranked Thornridge in the quarterfinals of the Illinois Class AA high school basketball championship, 82-52, Friday.

The No. 3 Black Hawks, noted all season for their defense, never trailed and limited Thornridge to only eight points in the first period and 21 in the first half. The loser's game total was the second lowest of the season, only one point more than Thornridge tallied in a 51-49 victory over Homewood Flossmoor.

West Aurora, winning its 24th straight game, reached its highest scoring total of the season, hitting the nets at 66.7 per cent in the first half, and then saved their stellar shooting show for the third period when they took 11 shots and dropped 10 of them for a 90.9 shooting average. They hit three of nine in the last quarter, when they scored 14 points on free throws for a 66 per cent game shooting mark.

Ron Hicks was Aurora's leading scorer with 22 points, while Jay Bryant netted 17 and center sophomore Bruce Johnson 15. Every Aurora starter scored in double figures and Coach John McDougal played 10 of his 12 man tournament roster.

The victory gave Aurora West a 29-2 record this season. It was the fourth defeat against 27 wins for Thornridge, eliminating the Falcons from a chance of winning a third championship in the last six years.

Robert Gatlin was Thornridge's high scorer with 15 points.

Decatur Pastes Marion

Decatur Eisenhower led after every period Friday to coast to an 81-66 victory over Marion for a semifinal berth in the Class AA Illinois High School basketball championship.

The win for Eisenhower, tied for No. 10 in UPI's regular season rating, put the Panthers into Saturday's first semifinal against No. 3 rated Aurora West which swamped Thornridge 82-52 in Friday's first game.

Eisenhower never was threatened after it broke out of a 6-6 tie in the first four minutes and worked to a 22-10 margin at the end of the first quarter and 45-26 at the half.

Eisenhower piled its tremendous margin with accurate field goal shooting, converting many layups on fast breaks and numerous short sets after rebounds. Eisenhower had only 10 opportunities for free throws and cashed in seven of them while netting 37 field goals.

Marion rallied in the third quarter to cut Decatur's lead to only nine points, but then Decatur tightened up and rolled away.

Jeff Roth netted 27 points to spark the Panthers to their 26th win against four losses and three of his teammates scored in double figures. Mike Montgomery was high for Marion, suffering its ninth loss against 20 wins, with 16.

COBB PACES MUSTANGS

Superstar Levi Cobb scored the last 12 points Friday night for Morgan Park to give the Mustangs a 53-48 triumph over unranked Galesburg in the quarterfinals of the Illinois Class AA High School basketball championship.

The Chicago Public League champion Mustangs played a nip-and-tuck contest with Galesburg, upsets of No. 1-ranked Peoria Richwoods, en route to the final round.

The Mustangs, winning their 26th game against five losses, got off to an early four-point lead, but Galesburg came from behind for a 9-9 tie and Morgan Park came from behind for an 11-11 tie at the end of the first quarter.

In the second quarter, each team scored eight points, Morgan Park coming from behind four times to tie.

The Mustangs really took control of the game in a span of three seconds in the final 40 seconds of the third period. With the score tied at 29-29, Eric Bowman scored from the key and Laird Smith stole the inbound pass for a layup three seconds later, giving Morgan Park a 33-29 lead at the three-quarter mark.

The Mustangs notched eight of the next 10 points in the game for a 10-point lead and then they left it to

OAK PARK SURVIVES

Chuck Dahms scored two field goals and his Oak Park-River Forest teammates seven free throws in a three minute overtime Friday night to give the Huskies a 56-53 victory over Loyola Academy to move them to the semifinals of the Class AA high school basketball championship.

Oak Park will play Chicago public league champion Morgan Park which won a 53-46 decision over Galesburg in the opener of the Friday night doubleheader.

The Oak Park-Loyola game was a Cobb, who connected for six field goals down the stretch to help his game-high total of 26 points.

Galesburg, taking its fourth loss against 27 wins, got 16 points from

BERRY-BERRY. Galesburg's Rance Berry (21) and Morgan Park's Jeff Berry fight for the ball during quarterfinal action in the Class AA Friday. Morgan Park fought off the Streak 53-48 to advance.

Mike Campbell and 14 from Scott Kelley. see-saw after the first quarter when Loyola worked to a 17-9 lead. Oak Park rallied for a 22-21 lead at the half and thereafter neither team could take charge. Oak Park had a seven point lead but Loyola wiped it out for a 35-34 advantage after three quarters.

The score changed hands nine times in the eight minutes of the fourth period and Roy Brandy's two free throws with 1:18 left produced a 45-45 tie at the end of regulation time.

Oak Park never trailed in the overtime as Dahms hit a basket off a missed free throw, Joe Hedger hit a free throw, Tom Norris connected for two, Hedger hit two more and Rod Underwood one to keep the Huskies in front.

Although Oak Park had a five-point lead, Loyola kept coming back to close to within two points twice in the final minute, but was unable to get another tying basket.

It was the 27th win against four losses for Oak Park and the ninth loss against 22 wins for Loyola.

WHO'S NO. 1? These West Aurora fans seem to think they are as their Black Hawks won their 24th game in a row to advance to the Class AA semi-finals today against Decatur-Eisenhower. West Aurora overwhelmed favored Thornridge 82-52 in quarterfinal action Friday.

World queen of the ice returns for celebrations

GREENWICH, Conn. (UPI) — Weekend celebrations here and in New York City are planned in honor of Dorothy Hamill, the Riverside brunette who captured the Olympic and World figure skating titles.

The new world queen of the ice returned to her home Thursday from Europe, where she won the Olympic Gold medal in February at Innsbruck, and then swept the world title last week in Sweden.

Hamill, flashing a smile although exhausted from her travels, was greeted by well wishers and family members at Kennedy Airport.

She spent Friday in a private visit to New York City where on Saturday, she was to appear before the National Women's Republican Club meeting. Mrs. Betty Ford was to present Hamill the association's outstanding young woman of the year award. It appeared likely that Hamill would be extended a formal invitation to visit the White House at a later date.

Hamill said she presently had no plans to compete as an amateur and was discussing future plans with her father, Chalmers Hamill Jr.

On Sunday, this town will have day-long ceremonies to honor its famous daughter, including the dedication of a skating rink in her honor and a visit to a local pond where she first learned to skate. Riverside is a section of Greenwich, within a half hour's drive from New York City on the Connecticut-New York border.

One town official said the celebration "will run from one end of town to the other," with school bands greeting the Hamill motorcade at various points.

Beginning around noon, the motorcade will travel to the Riverside Elementary School and Eastern Junior High School, which Miss Hamill attended, then to Binney Park for a plaque presentation at Binney Pond, where Hamill first learned to skate at the age of eight.

The motorcade will head to central Greenwich to Town Hall where First Selectman Rupert Vernon will give Hamill the key to the town.

Next, ceremonies will be held at the Byram Skating Rink in the Byram section to change the name to Hamill Skating Rink, to be followed by skating exhibitions by local ice skating clubs.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., and Rep. Stewart B. McKinney, R-Conn., were among those scheduled to speak at 3 p.m. ceremonies honoring Hamill at Greenwich High School where films of the skating queen's feats will be shown.

Finally, Hamill will hold a 4 p.m. news conference at the school.

CAVALRY CHARGE. Players from Marion and Decatur-Eisenhower track down a loose ball during quarter-final action of the Illinois Class AA basketball tournament. Eisenhower got to move loose balls as they eliminated Marion 81-66 to set up a meeting with West Aurora in today's semi-final action.

Sports world

BILL VEECK, the new owner of the Chicago White Sox, has been compared to P. T. Barnum but this is ridiculous. The Sox erected their own Big Top Friday to cover the infield at Comiskey Park. Veeck had the artificial turf removed and hopes the tent will help grass grow before the Sox open next month.

Big Bo boosts Bulls

Tom Boerwinkle scored a career-high 31 points and Mickey Johnson chipped in 20 Friday night to lead the Chicago Bulls to a 108-101 victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

The loss was the Hawks' fifth straight and their 13th consecutive on the road. It was the Bulls fourth win in the last seven games. Boerwinkle, who had 12 points in the first half in leading the Bulls to a 62-63 halftime advantage, scored six points in the third quarter and 13 in the final period.

Chicago led by eight points going into the final period. With 4:12 left to play, Wilbur Holland came off the bench for Atlanta to score 13 points but Boerwinkle's eight markers in the final three minutes kept the game out of Atlanta's reach. Lou Hudson led the Hawks with 27 points and John Drew added 20 in the losing effort.

Chicago upped its season total to 22-47. Atlanta fell to 28-41.

'Miami 3' are free

Commissioner Pete Rozelle Friday said Larry Csonka and former Miami Dolphin teammates Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield can talk contract with any club in the National Football League as long as they are free as Canadian millionaire John F. Bassett maintains.

"They can be signed any place," Rozelle told sports writers in a briefing near the end of the annual NFL owners meeting. "We just want to be positive that there's no legal basis for a problem with people other than Mr. Bassett."

Bassett announced in Toronto Friday that he had released the trio from contracts they signed with him to play for the defunct World Football League Memphis Grizzlies so they could seek employment in the NFL.

Bassett signed the three in a $3.7 million deal in 1974. He had hoped to win a franchise in the NFL for the 1976 season, but was turned down here Tuesday by the owners, leaving his team with no place to play.

"They're all free agents, just like Catfish Hunter," he said.

Rozelle, however, cautioned that the availability of the trio to sign a contract with one of the 28 NFL clubs for the 1976 season would hinge on clear evidence that they are free of all entanglements with the defunct World Football League.

Tyson second to one

Mike Tyson, reporting for his first spring workout Friday, found himself at second base for the St. Louis Cardinals with a new shortstop, Don Kessinger, in Tyson's former shoes.

"With a shortstop as experienced as Don, I don't believe we'll have much trouble," Tyson said.

He had been earmarked to move from short to second even before the Cardinals recently dealt Ted Sizemore to Los Angeles for Willie Crawford.

"I like second base better because it's my natural position," Tyson said.

Kessinger was acquired during the off-season from the Chicago Cubs.

Reporting for workouts Friday were infielders Tyson and Vic Harris, catcher Ken Rudolph, outfielder Mike Potter and pitchers Harry Parker, Steve Staniland and Steve Waterbury, bringing the number in camp to 23.

Stolz resignation accepted

Michigan State University trustees today formally approved the resignation of head football Coach Denny Stolz and cleared Vice President Jack Breslin of involvement in football recruiting violations.

Two trustees, Aubrey Radcliffe and Jack Stack, voted against the removal of Stolz, who resigned under pressure Tuesday as the result of information developed during an MSU probe into the football program.

The vote on firing basketball Coach Gus Ganakas, who apparently did not measure up to expectations in a one-year review period, was unanimous.

Published reports Thursday said that Breslin and Assistant Athletic Director Bill Beardley were the next victims in the sports department purge. Breslin voluntarily severed all ties with the athletic department earlier this year.

Province may take control

Quebec Minister of Finance Raymond Garneau said Friday the province may take over the $84 million Olympic Village in an effort to further control skyrocketing costs of the 1976 Summer Olympics which are expected to show a deficit of $900 million.

Garneau also said the over-all costs may reach $1.33 billion. A takeover of the village would place all major construction for the Olympics under control of the Quebec government. Sources said it was likely the village would be administered by the Olympic Installations Board, which took over control of other Olympic facilities last November from the Montreal city government.

"We will be able to announce a decision within seven to 10 days," Garneau told newsmen.

Garneau said, "If things could be done over again, the Quebec government would have become involved in the Olympic Village from the very beginning, not only to assure a better accounting system but also better management."

'It looked like Moby Dick in the water'

Lake County yields record bass

Don't mind Ed Waibel if he's developed a habit of glancing over his shoulder or staring into the rearview mirror of his car.

Ever since the Elmwood Park resident added a new Illinois record 13-pound, 1-ounce largemouth bass to his already wall-cracking collection of trophy fish, envious fellow anglers are anxious to follow the 28-year-old to the scene of his latest conquest.

"I fished a gravel pit in northern Lake County," Waibel offered without getting specific. "I'd tell you where, but I think the place would be mobbed by other fishermen and the owners of the property might not be too happy."

Waibel, who fishes the mystery bigmouth paradise 3-4 times a week had previously taken a 7-pounder from the pit, but he never expected a monster almost twice that size.

"It looked like Moby Dick in the water," Waibel recalled of that cold Feb. 15 afternoon. "At first, I thought I had a carp. I knew it was a big fish, but he was coming up slowly, like dead weight."

"Seven feet from shore he broke water and I got my first look at him."

Ten minutes later the battle was over, but almost lost as the bass split the hook at the landing net. Fortunately the bigmouth tumbled into the mesh and not into the water.

"I'll be the first to admit that luck plays as big a part of fishing as anything else," Waibel said. "That fish could have easily fallen the other way and he'd still be swimming around, getting bigger and fatter."

The monster measured 30 inches long and 28 inches around its girth. Its mouth, frozen open by the taxidermist, was a devouring six inches in diameter, easily swallowing both fists of an average man's hands.

Waibel's bucketmouth shattered the previous record held by James Crandall of Gillespie who took a 12-pound, 8-ounce bass from Lake Carlville in Macoupin County in 1969.

"I was a little skeptical when I received the call to confirm the fish," Illinois Dept. of Conservation district biologist Jim Langebein admitted.

"You just don't hear of that big a fish coming out of northern Illinois because the growing season up here is only about 5-6 months (April through September).

"The average age of a largemouth bass in Lake County is about 10 years and that's if its free of outside forces like fishing pressure.

"I estimated this one to be about 16 years old and you know a fish has to be pretty smart to survive that long. After examining it, there's no question that he came from northern Illinois."

If lady luck smiled on Ed Waibel during his titanic struggle with the record fish, she might be considered a constant companion to the avid angler.

Waibel's wall supports over 100 pounds of mounted fish, a display you might expect to see in a taxidermy shop rather than an Elmwood Park home.

Among the school of plaster-straining trophies are a 25-pound steelhead that would have been a state record if it had been registered, two king salmon that go 30 and 37 pounds and a 3-pound crappie.

Despite his modest reference to the luck factor, Waibel owns a technically solid foundation of knowledge for fresh-water fishing.

"I just happened to be in the right place at the right time," he insists. "But I'm a firm believer in things like structure fishing, water temperature, weather conditions, bait presentation, time of season and time of day."

Waibel makes mental notes of every fishing hole he visits. "One day we caught a couple of small bass and when we cut them open, we found their stomachs full of small minnows.

"The next day we went back to where we saw the minnows spawning and caught and released 35 fish."

Waibel's record bass was taken on a one-eighth ounce yellow Mr. Twister lure and eight-pound test line.

"The water temperature was only 41 degrees and it was two o'clock in the afternoon," he recollected. "There was still ice in the middle of the lake, but it's spring fed and there's an abundance of crayfish and minnows making it very fertile for bass."

"A lot of guys think it's too early in the year to be fishing, but we never quit. I get a lot of nice fish through the ice, too."

A state record fish inevitably draws massive attention. "I've had calls from people I haven't seen in 15 years," Waibel said.

"Guys I've never met want to go fishing with me and the manufacturers of the tackle I was using want me to do endorsements."

"It gets to be quite a headache after a while," he said. "I've already had my phone number unlisted and if I had to do it all over again, I probably would have eaten that bass."

Record fish requirements

The Illinois Dept. of Conservation keeps complete listings of all record fish taken in the state. But it's up to each angler who suspects he has caught a big one to initiate the proceedings.

To qualify for a new state record, a fisherman must have taken the fish with pole and line. As quickly as possible (fish lose valuable weight when taken from the water) the fish must be weighed on a scale licensed by the state and in the presence of at least two witnesses.

An entry form may be secured from the Illinois Dept. of Conservation, Division of Fisheries, 605 State Office Building, Springfield, Ill., 62706.

If possible, a black and white picture should be taken and sent to Springfield with the entry blank and an affidavit signed by both witnesses confirming the weight.

After weighing, the fish should be frozen so that an Illinois biologist can positively identify it and perform tests to determine such things as its age.

Don't remove the head or any other parts. The fish can still be mounted or eaten after these tests. Fish caught at fee areas are not eligible for the record books.

Experimental lake trout stocking planned in May

An experimental offshore stocking of lake trout in Lake Michigan is planned for this May by Illinois Department of Conservation fishery biologists who hope offshore stocking may prove the key to successful reproduction of lake trout in the lake.

Studies last fall by Lake Michigan fishery biologist Harry Wight indicated that lake trout are not reproducing, despite the fact that over one million have been stocked in Lake Michigan since 1968.

Stocking of the fish in relatively shallow harbors may have prevented successful reproduction, Wight said, because it appears that the fish return to the harbors to spawn instead of seeking out the more desirable offshore reefs. The possibility of PCB pollution affecting survival of newly hatched fish is also being investigated by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Wight earlier thought that offshore stocking would have to wait until a study of the lake bottom was completed by the Illinois Natural History Survey. In talking to commercial fishermen, however, he was told of an uncharted reef east of the Waukegan harbor. Fishermen familiar with the area told Wight the reef was 100 feet deep. Such a depth would prevent young salmon "fry" from being subjected to turbulence during storms.

About 60,000 of the 182,000, 5-inch yearling lake trout the Department of Conservation will receive from the Jordan River National Fish Hatchery in Michigan are to be stocked offshore with the help of a chartered commercial fishing vessel. Those fish will be stocked on two separate occasions, May 4 and 11.

An indication of the success of the offshore stocking will not come for four more years, when the fish mature. At that time, if sampling of the lake trout in the reef area indicates they are spawning, it is possible the lake trout will be back on the road to self-sufficiency.

Lake trout were virtually eliminated from Lake Michigan during the late 1950's because of the encroachment of the predatory sea lamprey and over-fishing by commercial fishermen.

Steelhead spawn at other end of rainbow

BERRIEN SPRINGS, Mich. — The "Steelhead" Angler cast his spawn bag into a likely looking riffle of the St. Joseph River and kept the line taut as the swift river current carried the bait bouncing downstream along the rocky bottom.

When the bait suddenly stopped, he reared back on his stiff seven-foot fishing rod, hoping to send the short-shanked steel hook into the jaw of a "steelhead."

As occurs most of the time, the hook instead found an underwater obstacle. The fisherman had no option but to break the line, re-rig it with sinker, hook and spawn sack and try again.

Despite lost equipment and bait, this method of fishing is a favorite among Great Lakes' anglers who pursue the spring and fall-run rainbow trout called "steelhead." The lake-run fish, like their saltwater relatives, seek spawning grounds in feeder rivers and streams.

On some days spinners, spoons and other hardware produces better, but the most popular angling technique is the use of spawn sacks — fine cloth mesh about the size of a quarter tied into small pouches encircling the trout or salmon eggs.

Steelhead angling is no easy sport. Fishermen often have to put up with severe weather conditions or wade streams that seem barely above freezing. Most importantly, the angler must learn how to read the water so he doesn't waste his time fishing dead areas.

Besides learning which slicks, pools and riffles are good holding areas for the migrating trout, he must know how to catch them.

The preference of spawn bags often is a matter of economics. It's cheap to put together spawn sacks, especially when the angler has caught a trout full of roe. Although he can count on losing numerous hooks and sinkers, it's a lot less expensive than replacing the same number of lures.

And, the beginning steelheader better be prepared to lose plenty of rigs or he won't be fishing right.

The migrating rainbow like to pick up their food rolling along the bottom, and unless a lure or spawn sack is presented in that manner, the chances of a strike are slim.

Some anglers prefer to cast the lure into a likely spot downstream and then retrieve it back slowly along the bottom. But experienced fishermen who have developed a touch for this type of angling enjoy casting slightly upstream. They keep the slack out of the line as the bait is bounced downstream along the bottom so they are ready to set the hook instantly if the lure or spawn bag stops for any reason.

"Too many beginners are reluctant to set the hook," remarked an old-timer who was fishing the St. Joe. "Sure, sometimes they hit like a ton of bricks, but most of the time the average fisherman can't even tell when he gets a hit. Not everyone can detect the light pickup of a steelie, so it's better to slam the hook and lose a rig than not to set it and miss a fish."

Steelheaders prefer a longer rod with some backbone for just that reason, so they can drive the hook home. The use of sinkers may vary from split shot to three quarter-ounce bell sinkers, depending on how fast the current is in the river or stream being fished. The split shot often is favored because the angler can add as much as he needs depending on conditions.

The rigging techniques vary with personal preference, but the beginner can be safe starting with a three-way swivel. Attach a bell sinker to one section of the swivel, add about an 18-inch leader with a hook to another, and tie the line from the rod to the third.

If a lighter line is used on the sinker, often the angler will lose only the sinker if he snags the rig and has to break it free.

Another method is to simply tie the hook directly to the line from the reel and use as much split shot as needed about 18 inches from the hook.

There are dozens of secrets experienced anglers use to increase their odds for success, but a spawn bag is easily used by the beginner as long as he remembers to keep it on the bottom and set the hook immediately when the lure stops.

Most of the time it'll be a snag, but when it's a steelie, the beginner will know it.

Lake Michigan smelt season opens April 1

The smelt fishing season along Chicago's Lake Michigan shoreline will open at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 1, and end at 3 p.m. Monday, May 10, announced Edmund L. Kelly, general superintendent of the Chicago Park District.

If unseasonably warm weather prevails and the run begins prior to the official date, Kelly assures fishing enthusiasts that arrangements will be made to move up the opening date.

Under the rules for smelt fishing, jointly set up by the Illinois Department of Conservation and the Chicago Park District, fishermen may use only portable equipment that can be set up and dismantled in the same 24-hour period. No drilling of holes or permanent fixing of equipment is permitted.

Smelt fishing on the lakefront is restricted to the period of 7 p.m. to 3 a.m. during the smelt fishing season. Equipment may not be placed at any other time except during this eight-hour period.

Fishermen must conform to the revised rules and regulations of the conservation department and the Chicago Park District. The regulation which limits the number of nets to one per person will be rigorously enforced, Kelly said.

Smelts must be taken with a gill net or dip net. Such gill nets shall not exceed 12 feet in length, 6 feet in depth and have a mesh size not greater than 1½ inches diagonal stretch. Dip nets shall not exceed 12 feet in diameter and have a mesh size of not less than one inch diagonal stretch.

The district prohibits the building of shelters or fires, the use of intoxicants or the selling of fish on park property.

A state license is required for smelt fishing for those 16 years of age and over. They may be obtained at most bait shops, at room 187 at City Hall or at the State of Illinois Department of Conservation, 160 N. LaSalle.

The cost for the license, good for one year and covering all fish, is $2.25. Illinois residents 65 and over, blind persons and disabled persons are exempt.

Coho seminars at 5 sites

The Chicago Park District will conduct Coho Fishing Clinics at five park district locations in April to assist anglers in the upcoming Coho Fishing Contest, which will run throughout the month of May.

Representatives of the park district's recreation department and sports organizations will offer tips on fishing from the Lake Michigan shoreline and from boats, with emphasis on equipment, bait and technique.

The clinics are free of charge and are scheduled as follows:

7-9 p.m. Thursday, April 1: Mt. Greenwood Park, 3721 W. 111th St.
7-9 p.m. Tuesday, April 6: South Shore Country Club Park, 7059 S. South Shore Dr.

7-9 p.m. Thursday, April 8: Oriole Park, 5430 N. Olcott Ave.
7-9 p.m. Tuesday, April 13: Horner Park, 2741 W. Montrose Ave.

There will be a special city-wide clinic from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. on Saturday, April 24, at the north end of Soldier Field, for those unable to attend one of the evening clinics.

New scan sonar

Western Marine Electronics is introducing an entire new product line to the pleasure boating industry at the 1975 Marine Trades Exhibit and Conference in Chicago.

WESMAR officials said one product — the WESMAR SS80 Scanning Sonar — is "expected to revolutionize the boating and sports fishing industry."

The firm said the SS80 has a Cathode Ray Tube screen which provides the best operator with an instant picture of everything below the water surrounding his vessel.

Linn Burton— the man with perfect pitch

by John Maes

He's been called a "symphony in words and actions," and "an eloquent performer." References have been made to his "marvelous elocutionary tones."

An actor? Of sorts, but this performer is seen only between the acts.

The accolades describe Linn Burton, the avuncular, frosty-haired hawk of automobiles, auto paint jobs and Italian dinners on late-night television.

If you're a nocturnal Chicago television viewer, he's a familiar sight. Well-tailored and horn-rimmed bespectacled, he delivers his 60-second soliloquies patting sleek, shiny roadsters on the fender to whet your appetite for a new Ford. Or tries to convince you to chow down at Barone's.

After 30 years in television, many of them delivering his spirited sales pitches, Burton has gained himself a reputation paralleling many a local celebrity.

His wife, Ruth Kay Burton, herself a one-time radio personality, says heads turn when they're seen in restaurants at dinner or while grocery shopping.

Her husband's signed thousands of autographs and is flattered knowing his television incantations are the mimic of children, adults and party jokers all over.

Off-camera, in the den of their luxurious but comfortable Chicago Lake Point Towers apartment, Burton is the master of effusion and expression, just as he is before the lens.

In his smooth, staccato-style voice, arm extended, hand cupped as if to announce the latest, don't miss sale at Burr Weinman Ford, Burton explains that it's all natural.

"I don't feel like I'm a fixture alongside a product. I believe in animation whether it be an exuberant type of animation or a more conservative type of animation. If you put yourself in my place, when you carry on a conversation with somebody else, I'm sure that you never hold your hands completely at your side, you use your hands," he says.

"I don't do these things consciously, just naturally. I try to hold a person's interest with the words that have been written for me with and actions that just come naturally."

As far as Burton's concerned, the typical TV salesman's dilemma of holding the viewer's interest when the natural inclination is to grab a snack or let the dog out is no dilemma to him.

He's confident, and it's been proven via viewership studies; he says, that his appearance on the screen is watched almost as commonly as the late show itself.

"I think a lot of times and not in a braggadocious way, I feel I can hold a person for a commercial whereas they duck in and get a beer or something right after I'm finished."

His flair for television vivaciousness is due to a few different things, Burton says, not the least of which is the fact he's the son of a Minneapolis Methodist minister who was also "an eloquent man and a lot of that stuff has unconsciously embedded itself in me."

Burton says his style harkens back the old days of TV selling when "it was entirely and completely ad-lib — and you talked the audience into submission."

Though much more subtle a salesman now, Burton remembers commercials where he fell into a tub of water, got his tie caught in a washing machine ringer and would have doused himself with a bottle of beer, had he not been more concerned with the new suit he was wearing than a sale.

Says Burton: "It was an entirely different world of television."

Like many television personalities, he keeps his age a secret but adds, "I'm a lot younger than people think." His hair started graying when he was 17, he says.

Burton is unsure of some dates but says his first job behind the mike was in the late 1930s with what is now WAIT radio, a staff announcing job he won in an audition over 250 others. "And I had no radio experience," he says.

He came to television in 1942 with WBKB, now WBBM, the station on which he also hosted one of the first morning talk and audience participation shows, "Your Second Cup," from 1948 to 1950.

"It had a few years," he says, "and I did the emceeing. I did the commercials. I was the whole show."

For a time, he also hosted "Knot Hole Gang," a show that once preceded Cubs baseball.

He played one bit part in a film where he did a scene talking to a young boy in the "CYO (Catholic Youth Organization) Story" but that was about the extent of his exploits in dramatics.

Down at WGN studios where Burton tapes commercials, he's known as "one-take Burton" because of his ability to crank out five or six flawless commercials in two hours. Memorizing lines is something else.

"I don't have the faculty of being able to memorize lines. To hold the words of somebody else in my mind without something right there to give me a prompter, it's very difficult," he explains.

In fact, one time, having to get an entire script down for a Standard Oil commercial, Burton found himself consulting a hypnotist he'd interviewed on radio in an effort to help him memorize the material.

"What I finally had to do was take small slips of paper and put them down into the steering wheel (he was sitting in a car) because it was a close-up shot with me and we got through it OK."

There have been boo-boos too, a couple that at the time, made merchants certain they were headed for bankruptcy (Continued on Page 7)

Burton, TV's most popular hawk, takes his job seriously.

Up, Up, and AFRAID

Story by Lynn Asinof
Photos by Dom Najolia

They're called the white-knuckle set. When the big jet engines start to roar and the plane lurches forward, their stomachs take a similar lurch. They are fearful fliers.

It is estimated there are some 25 million fearful fliers in this country alone. Many fly because they have to and die a thousand deaths with each takeoff. Others have never even gotten on a plane or stopped flying after one or two flights.

The fears often don't make sense. There's one lady who can't bring herself to shut the lavatory door on the plane. "If I locked the door and couldn't open it and no one heard me, I'd rot in there. Right?" she said.

Some people feel fine flying if the sky is blue but turn into airborne basket cases in bad weather. Others can't stand the idea of being in a confined space.

Capt. T.W. "Slim" Cummings said some people are so scared of flying that they break out in a cold sweat just watching a plane or being inside an airport.

These are the fears Cummings tries to meet head on in his fearful fliers course, which has been conducted by Pan American World Airways in Atlanta, Houston, Miami and now Chicago.

In part, teaching the course is "a big nursemaid's job," said Cummings, formerly a licensed psychologist. Teaching people to cope with their fears makes him the object of hero-worship, which he doesn't seem to mind at all.

"I'm aware that I am a father, brother, parent, therapist, guru — depending on the person's perception," Cummings said. "And I like that."

The truth of his words was demonstrated by a plaque presented to him recently by a graduating class of 60 students in Chicago. It described him as "pilot, teacher, humanist and friend."

The seven-session course starts with rap sessions where the group concentrates "on the things we're afraid of like weather and doors closing and putting our lives in the hands of pilots," said Nancy Vance of Chicago.

Her husband is a pilot and she hates to fly. "It causes problems," she said.

The fearful fliers are taught the various sounds the plane should make while on the ground, during takeoff, flight and landing. They also tour the control tower to see how the planes are guided into the airport, and have two taxi sessions in a Boeing 707.

All this is preparation for the day the fearful fliers graduate or "fly up," as the Girl Scouts say. It includes a one-hour champagne flight to nowhere that lets the fearful fliers test out all they learned about controlling their fears.

As a result of the special instruction, Vincent Battista knew exactly when the outside generator was disconnected from the plane, when the landing gear was raised and lowered and when the big jets reversed themselves on landing. He said the tour of the tower also helped.

"It helped a lot," Battista said. "I know we have guys there who know where we stand."

Battista, originally from Italy, said he's flown between the U.S. and Europe several times. He said it's the only way he can see his parents, even though flying in bad weather gives him the heebie-jeebies.

A game soothes Esther Klein.

Champagne eases the tension for some.

Graduation from fearful fliers school is conducted at a boarding gate over the airline intercom.

A large part of the course is devoted to just learning how to relax. That includes breathing exercises done by the whole group with Cummings at the helm.

"You are giving your body and mind a treat . . . and it's very important to you," Cummings crooned into the plane's intercom system on flight day. "Let a feeling of passiveness come over you."

Cummings used other gimmicks to get his fearful fliers to relax. Just at the moment of takeoff he told the group to WYT — wiggle your toes. To release tension he led the group in several rounds of rousing applause for anyone and everyone involved in the flight. No one held back.

For some the flight was terrifying. One man burst into tears after takeoff and wept uncontrollably for several minutes.

Others found the flight exhilarating, including Peter Cottini of Chicago who had never flown before. "No matter how many times I fly after this, it'll never be like this time," he said, after the clouds briefly parted to give him his first aerial view of earth.

One man said the course was his salvation. He is supposed to fly as part of his work, and his fear was getting in the way of his career. "It's the first time I've flown in two years," he said.

True, some people didn't make it onto the graduation flight. Three turned back at the airport, but 60 of the original 70 enrolled "flew up."

Cummings said the course attracts an educated and ambitious type person. Statistics show the average person enrolled in the course is 41 years old and has more than three years of college education. There were three psychologists enrolled in the Chicago course.

"For everyone who takes the course, there are 30 who would like to take the course," Cummings said. "They don't want to admit they are fearful."

Pan Am has received more than 70 inquiries from people who want to take the course, tentatively scheduled for a second session this summer. Cummings said many of these people will get cold feet.

"You'll find they're not as anxious to come as you think," he said. "They back out."

It costs several thousand dollars for Pan Am to conduct the course, and the nominal $25 course fee makes only a small dent. "But good will is created," Cummings said, admitting that the course is largely good public relations for Pan Am.

The flight crews who donate their time to participate in the course also seem to benefit from the experience. "My reason was interest," said flight attendant Kerri Gill, explaining why she flew in from Miami for the graduation flight. "I have run across several hysterical people on airplanes and I haven't known how to deal with them."

She said the course helped her understand some of the fears of flying, and said she will be better equipped to help frightened people in the future.

As part of the course, the fearful fliers promise to take another flight within a month of graduation. Cummings said a special cassette is being prepared to help the fearful fliers handle future flights.

Most of the graduates, however, said they were excited by the prospect of long-distance air travel. Many said it would give them a chance to visit far away places for the first time.

Some people from the course are planning a reunion flight to Rio de Janeiro later in the year with Capt. Cummings in the cockpit. Others like Esther Klein of Des Plaines will take shorter trips. Her husband arranged a trip to Los Angeles when he enrolled her in the course.

The battle to control their fears is far from over, but the fearful fliers course gave most hope for handling the problem.

As Nancy Vance said, still high from the excitement of the flight, "My sister is getting married next week and I'm flying to New York and I don't think I'm going to be afraid."

One graduation present was a model plane.

Burton:

but actually turned out to be blessings in disguise.

Burton remembers one in particular, a National Clothing Store Commercial when he mistakenly announced that men's under shorts were selling for three pairs instead of one at 95 cents.

The owner, in the studio at the time, was screaming that his business would be ruined, but Burton told him "you just don't correct something like that."

The next day, at the store's seven locations, "they couldn't get in the front door of any one of their stores," Burton says. "They had the biggest day of selling everything they had in the store. The racks were practically dry at the end of the day and all because of three pairs of shorts for 95 cents instead of one pair."

Advertisers frequently seek out Burton to do commercials in other cities. He's been seen on television stations in Rockford, the Quad Cities and recently did several for a television and stereo equipment sales firm in Milwaukee.

Burton believes in the "sincerity of sell" and won't represent any sponsors he feels are a "fly by night."

"I've got to have a substantial, a well fortified sponsor in backing me before I will take on his product," he says.

"I don't need excuses to be on television so if the product isn't right, the sponsor isn't right, I don't see any reason to be up there and disarm myself as far as honesty is concerned."

The Burtons don't have a whole lot of time for hobbies but Ruth Kay has a green thumb and their apartment, abundant in foliage, shows it. She also clothes shops with Burton and selects the natty attire he wears on the air.

"I used to be known as a sloppy dresser," he says.

A lot of time is consumed with administering a South Side rib restaurant they own and "we spend a lot of time with sponsors discussing their problems and what is necessary to try and stimulate their business."

Burton doesn't help compose commercials (some of the zany sales slogans, "April-itis" and "May-hem" are thought up by ad agencies) but one time was inspired with an idea while in bed at 2 a.m. He woke up his wife and went into the den to work on it. It was later used on the air.

One yen for the Burtons is to return at least part-time to their old craft — radio. Burton talks of the possibility of the two of them co-hosting a radio talk show if an interested producer ever comes along.

Every once in a while the Burtons sit back to watch the late show themselves — and the commercials. Burton critiques himself too but the most penetrating analysis of his style and delivery comes from his wife. "I keep my mouth shut," he says, "and wait for her to make a comment. If she keeps her mouth shut, I'm worried — she's my best critic."

Filmmakers invited to enter Chicago film festival contest

Chicago area filmmakers — both students and professionals — are invited to enter their films for consideration for the Second Annual Festival of Chicago Filmmakers sponsored by Columbia College of Chicago.

All types of film including documentary, educational, commercial, feature and animation will be considered for exhibit during the festival May 16 at Lake Shore Theater, 3175 N. Broadway, Chicago. Deadline for entries is May 3.

A panel of experts will screen the entries and develop a representative 2½-hour program for the show. Anthony Loeb, director of the festival and chairman of Columbia's film department, said the college decided to make the festival an annual event because of last year's success. More than 600 people attended last year's festival.

There will be a $2 admission to the festival and proceeds, after costs, will be divided among the filmmakers whose films are selected for exhibition. For further details on the show, contact Loeb at 467-0300, ext. 534.

From the heart and hand of Jose Fuentes de Salamanca ...

The Apostles of Jesus Christ

Each set of drawings is beautifully reproduced on 8½" x 11" parchment stock, then carefully bound. This collection is available in softbound or Deluxe Leatherette hardbound versions. Either style will certainly remain a lifetime treasure. We are pleased to present this collection in time for Easter.

The U.S. Postal Service will issue a 13-cent commemorative stamp honoring Chemistry on April 6.

Designed by Ken Davies of Madison, Conn., the stamp depicts four flasks commonly found in a chemistry laboratory. Davies achieved a near-photographic effect with his design by using very thin oil paints and sable brushes.

The new issue will be printed on the gravure press with 50 stamps to a pane and six plate numbers.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations should send their requests to "Chemistry Stamp, Postmaster, New York, N.Y. 10001" enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed.

On March 12, the Canada Post Office released two high value commemorative stamps depicting 1976 Olympic Games sites.

Dumping out the TV trash can

Don't expect better shows next fall

by Dick Kleiner

In the annals of television history, whenever anybody writes such a study, the season of '75-'76 will probably be called The Year The Bottom Dropped Out.

The TV season we've all just lived through was a disaster, a debacle, a dog. More than a dozen of the new entries were cancelled and even those that made it were mostly hanging on by the skin of their ratings. Hits were rarer than pits in seedless grapes.

The big question is: did the networks learn anything from last season's expensive tragedy?

The answer seems to be a resounding NO!

"The networks haven't learned a thing," says Columbia Pictures' talent coordinator, Renee Valente. "They're doing the same old thing. Looking at the pilots, it's enough to make you sick."

She says that we can expect '76-'77 to be pretty much the same sort of season we've just barely survived. The plans, apparently, are for the identical mix of cops and lawyers, doctors and situation comedies. Nothing has changed.

"The pilots in the works," says Twentieth Century-Fox's TV head, Sy Salkowitz, "look to be pretty much the same as they were last year."

"I doubt TV will learn anything from the debacle of this past season," says producer Bob Banner.

The question then arises — why don't the networks change and try to improve their product? The answer seems to be that they can't. They're locked in to the current format by tradition, by habit, by unimaginative programmers.

"The logistics of TV have become so complex," says Banner, "that it is hard to imagine any drastic changes."

He says that TV is still governed by what he calls "the aspirin policy" — "they figure that if one aspirin makes a headache feel better, 100 aspirins will make it feel 100 times better. And, in fact, 100 aspirins can kill you. But they figure if one show is a hit, make 100 just like it."

There may, in the final analysis, be one major breakthrough credited to the otherwise dismal '75-'76 season. And that breakthrough was the 12-hour version of Irwin Shaw's novel, "Rich Man, Poor Man." Frank Price, president of Universal TV, thinks that could be a milestone.

"The most significant thing this season could be the impact 'Rich Man, Poor Man' has," Price says. "Its potential impact on TV is enormous."

"The whole idea is unprecedented in the field of entertainment. To me, the idea of being able to tell a total story is tremendously exciting."

But, "Rich Man, Poor Man" aside, there is very little brewing on the episodic TV front of great inventiveness. A few people see the gradual return of Westerns, which is hardly a brand-new breakthrough.

"They want action shows," Salkowitz says, "but less emphasis on cops. Westerns may be the answer. I see a small shift in attitude toward the Western. Last year, there were none. This year a few Western pilots have been made."

Banner himself is producing Almost Anything Goes, the town-vs.-town stunt show. It seems to be working. He thinks here again attempts will be made to copy his format.

"There's already been a copy shown one time on CBS," he says. "I'm willing to bet that if our show is a hit, within six months there will be some 40 similar ideas submitted to the networks and three of those, conservatively, will be made into pilots."

The "Family Hour" concept, which created such a storm when it was introduced last season, will continue. But, most experts believe, the shows placed in that hour will be a little meatier than they were last year, when bland ruled supreme.

There may also be some small resurgence in science-fiction, as yet another way of giving the audience action without having to resort to the cops-and-robbers format.

"The success of The Six Million Dollar Man and The Bionic Woman," Price says, "makes me think there will be more investigation into the science fiction adventure arena. There used to be a cliché in TV that a sci-fi show will never get above a 28-share in the ratings. These shows are doing much better."

But, those slight changes aside, most TV people expect next season's programming to be pretty much a duplicate of this season's. A few Westerns, perhaps, and sci-fi show or two, but really nothing new or exciting.

"TV changes by inches," says Salkowitz, "not by feet."

Schaumburg Mattress Factory

Thoughts on a Mattress

How many coils should there be in a good innerspring mattress? Some stores would lead you to believe the more coils the better the mattress. This is somewhat of a misrepresentation to put it mildly.

If this is true, then why do almost all of the major mattress manufacturers use an innerspring unit in the 308 to 322 coil range in the best mattress they make? Because they have determined from years of experience that an innerspring unit in this coil range, combined with the right gauge of wire in the coils, makes the most comfortable and most durable mattress.

The fact is that the more coils you put in a mattress, the smaller the coil you must use. The smaller the coil, the lighter gauge wire you must use. The result is a softer coil and softer unit, or in other words, less support and less durability.

Some day maybe we'll make a mattress with 5,000 coils. It may not be very comfortable and may not last very long, but boy, will it have coils!!!

In the meantime, we'll just keep making good, comfortable mattresses like they used to make them.

Now, if you are thoroughly confused by all this conversation about coils, come in and let us show you the actual innerspring units that we put in our mattresses. Maybe we can deconfuse you.

Special examines sinking of the Andrea Doria

The mystery of the Andrea Doria, the luxury liner that sunk off the east coast in 1956, will be examined on a CBS special Wednesday at 7 p.m.

The findings of the first expedition to film the hulk of the liner, which rests on the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean, will be shown on "The Mystery of the Andrea Doria."

The expedition was headed and the film is being produced by Peter Gimbel, film maker and explorer, and Elga Andersen.

Brink's robbery, the perfect crime, subject of CBS Friday night movie

It was called "the perfect crime," and for six years the theft of more than $2,750,000 from Brink's Incorporated captivated the imagination of the country with its daring and success.

"Brink's: The Great Robbery," a story from the annals of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will be shown on "The CBS Friday Night Movies," Friday at 8 p.m.

The cast includes Carl Betz, Darren McGavin, Leslie Nielsen, and Jenny O'Hara.

After months of careful planning, seven armed, masked men entered the Prince Street facility of Brink's Incorporated, in Boston, Mass., on Jan. 17, 1950. Shortly before 7:30 P.M., they were able to escape European actress. Gimbel and another diver, Joseph Fox, were the first to dive and photograph the liner the day after she went to the bottom. The film makers spent August, 1975 shooting the special.

Fog horns moaned along the shores in the area the night of July 25, 1956 but aboard the elegant 30,000-ton luxury liner about 50 miles south of Nantucket Island guests were celebrating. They were to arrive in New York the following day and were scarcely aware of the fog since the sea was dead calm.

with a record haul of stolen property. The leader of the raid was James McNally, who, with his closest ally, Danny Conforti, was the central figure in the Federal Bureau of Investigation's pursuit and the key to the case's solution.

Because the group of robbers took cash, checks and other securities of the Federal Reserve Bank and the Veteran's Administration district office, the FBI quickly joined the Boston police in the investigation of the Brink's robbery. Two of the Bureau's special agents, Norman Houston and Donald Nash, doggedly pursued the case for six years before they could finally close their files on the robbery. The story is the dramatization of the case.

Then — at 11:20 p.m. — the bow of the Swedish liner Stockholm ripped into the Andrea Doria, changing exuberance to horror. By 22:25 a.m. July 26 the 1,134 passengers and 500 crew members of the Italian liner were ordered to abandon ship. Fifty-one people died in the disaster.

Gimbel said that after his fourth dive to the ship in 1966 he never expected to see the Andrea Doria again. "But recently," he said, "Elga's conviction that the ship never should have gone down got the better of me. Elga had been struck by a Congressional committee report which concluded in part: 'The fact remains that a fine, relatively new ship did sink after damage apparently less than she should have been able to withstand.'"

Anthony Zerbe

Could I have some information on Anthony Zerbe who plays Lt. K.C. Trench on "Harry-O"?

A.J.

Appearing for the first time as a series regular on "Harry-O," Anthony Zerbe is a veteran stage and film character who has guested on numerous TV series. His movie credits include: "Rooster Cogburn," "Papillon," "The Laughing Policeman," "The Omega Man," "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," "The Liberation of Lord Byron Jones" and "Parallax View." Zerbe is also a leading actor with many prominent resident theatres in the U.S.

Did Robert Blake ("Barretta") play the part of Little Beaver in the old TV series "Leave it to Beaver"?

M.S.

Robert Blake played Little Beaver in the "Red Ryder" movie theater serials. Jerry Mathers played the Beaver in the "Leave it to Beaver" TV series which ran from 1957-63.

Betty White

A friend of mine insists that Betty White (Sue Ann Nivens, the "Happy Homemaker" on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show") once played the part of the mother on "Lassie." I disagree. Who's right?

J.L.

You are. The mother roles on "Lassie" were played by Jan Clayton (1954-57 series with Tommy Rettig) and June Lockhart (1958-64 series with Jon Provost).

Can you tell me where to write to U.S. figure skater and Olympic gold medal winner Dorothy Hamill?

A.R.

You can write to Miss Hamill in care of the U.S. Figure Skating Assn., Sears Crescent, Suite 500, City Hall Plaza, Boston, Mass. 02108.

Could you please tell me the name of the old TV medical type show with Richard Boone?

J.H.

"Medic" was the series which ran from 1954-56, featuring Richard Boone as Dr. Konrad Styner.

Can Mac beat the Waltons?

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Waltons: 3. Mac Davis: 0. That's the score, folks.

Mac is a good ol' Texas country boy at war with the Walton Family, a war he can't win for losin'.

He's lost three battles against the Walton tribe in the past two years. His musical shows have gone down to defeat in the Nielsen ratings in direct confrontation with the popular family series.

In 1975 Mac lasted 13 weeks. He suffered the same humiliation last year. Thirteen and kaput. Additionally, a Davis special in 1975 was spotted against "The Waltons." And again he was shot down.

But Mac ain't a Texan for nothin'. He's persistent. Last week on NBC Mac tackled the poverty stricken wretches of Walton's mountain for a fourth try. This time he's been allotted only 10 weeks to unhorse the high-riding clan.

"It's a tough row to hoe," said Mac, girding for the skirmish. "We both attract the same kind of audience."

Mac's strength lies with the folk in rural America. And that's precisely where John-Boy and his gang are most popular.

For some reason city dudes don't cotton to yoked humor, git-fiddle music and down home folksiness. At least not for long.

Jim Nabors, Glen Campbell, Roger Miller, Johnny Cash and others have tried the bigtime, prime-time network scene and were routed by sophisticated sitcoms, cop shows and razzle-dazzle musical series.

"Hee Haw" survives in syndication but its popularity in Manhattan and Hollywood is moot.

"I'm aware that in order to succeed I have to appeal to people in the big population centers," said the curly haired troubador. "I have to find audiences in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles."

"But I gotta be myself and be honest or I'll lose my roots. It's a fine line for me. This time I think I've got a chance to be around more than 10 weeks."

"As it is, I get picked up and dropped like a Las Vegas bar fly. I think I hold the record for pickups and drops at one network. If I don't make it this time, it can't be done."

In the past NBC has set Mac down in a pre-conceived format. He could have been replaced by almost any number of established performers and viewers would have seen essentially the same show.

But Mac is no rube. "This time they're building a format around me instead of just sticking me in a show," he said.

"The country boy with a guitar is part of the American tradition. This show will reflect my own personality. I'm not going to wear the rhinestone denims. Mostly I'll wear a tuxedo."

"And sketches are out. Comedy will be worked into the show with a few blackouts and in my songs. I'll be dancing, too."

There won't be as many of Mac's original compositions as in the past either. Rather than repeat his tried and true favorites, he'll delve into the works of other writer-singers.

"I'm still writing music whenever I have time. And I'm going to keep that segment where I ask people in the studio audience for a line or phrase and then ad lib a song to match it."

"A survey showed it is the most popular thing I do. We're adding another wrinkle. At the end of every show I'll sing a number sent to me by amateur song writers. We've taped some shows already, and that's a lot of fun."

Mac will have his hands full nonetheless. If his luck holds, John-Boy Walton will take up the guitar and knock him out of the box again.

EDDIE'S

RESTAURANT and LOUNGE

Eddie's Restaurant and Lounge located conveniently at 10 E. Northwest Highway in downtown Arlington Heights is one of the oldest and finest family restaurants in town. The service is excellent, the atmosphere always congenial. Specializing in "real home cooking" their homemade pies, especially the banana and coconut cream are something! An extra "goodie" is their fresh and tasty date nut bread served with their varied menu.

Wednesday the special is delicious fried chicken or tempting fried perch served family style with crisp french fries and creamy homemade cole slaw.

Friday evening is the special elegant fried perch night. The best advice — come early, it starts at 5.00 p.m.

On Sunday the fried chicken is featured along with delicious homemade pies.

The menu at Eddie's is excellent and their homemade soups are recommended, either at their daily luncheon specials or at dinner. During the Lenten season a wide variety of fish are on the menu.

Dining at Eddie's is reasonable and enjoyable. Carry out service is available, just call CL 3-1320.

TV TIME-LINE

President Ford's election committee took Chicago's independent television station, WGN-TV, before the FCC because it refused 30 to 60 second political commercials. It had been station policy to only sell spots of five minutes or more. The station contended that a candidate cannot speak on the issues in less than five minutes.

The FCC, by a margin of one vote, concurred with the election committee, thus reducing the selling of a political candidate to the same level as that of feminine hygiene products.

A suspect in five murders was apprehended recently in Chicago thanks to his addiction to "The Bionic Woman." The police were informed that the suspect never missed the show and would return to his apartment when the show was to be aired. As he did, he was arrested and charged.

Producers Larry Gelbart and Chris Hayward of "M*A*S*H" and "Barney Miller," respectively, have decided to call it quits. Both cited exhaustion as a result of the weekly grind. Gelbart will continue with his theatrical and Broadway ventures already underway. Hayward will produce the Greg Sierra pilot for ABC and co-script "Fish," both Miller spin-offs.

PERSONALITY POTPOURRI: The Fonzie Fan Club, P.O. Box 35910, Los Angeles, Ca. 90035, decided it would handle the requests for "Fonzie" T-shirt.

Shelby Lyman on chess

Have you ever considered losing weight through exercise? Unfortunately, books on diet give discouraging statistics. You learn, for example, that a 40 minute walk at a moderate pace will burn up only 100 or so calories. Obviously, anytime you wish, a few days on a treadmill can do wonders for you.

Nevertheless, there is hope. Health specialists have overlooked the ultimate weight-losing exercise. Flex your muscles, fellows and girls, it's . . . chess!

Physiological studies at Temple University have shown that "the physical strain of tournament chess, as measured by pulse-rate, skin temperature and other indexes is equivalent to a ten-round boxing match or five sets of tennis." (Readers' Digest, 1972.)

Unbelievable? Fantastic? So it seems but in the last several days, a 15-year-old told me that he dropped six pounds during a two-day chess tournament. And a 50-year-old (with lower metabolism) claimed an eight pound loss during a two-and-a-half day competition.

There you have it. Give up the sedentary life. Play chess!

It's also good for fallen arches.

BEGINNER'S CORNER: Hint and Explanation for Prokofiev's king is vulnerable on the black diagonal.

In our last column we alluded to the ex-World Champion Michael Botvinnik's notable courage and discipline at the chessboard. His fighting qualities are illustrated in the following famous game (Not-

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

South can count 13 easy tricks if hearts and diamonds both break 3-3. He can count 12 if either suit breaks. Suppose both suits are unkind enough to misbehave?

South can still make his contract if he can develop a squeeze. The squeeze will develop if one opponent stops both suits. It will fail miserably if each opponent has a red-suit stopper.

It will fail even more miserably if South wins the first club. South only has 11 winners and must lose the first in order to go through the process known as rectifying the count.

Any smart declarer is not going to worry about giving up an overtrick when the contract is a slam so South ducks the first club.

He wins the second and proceeds to run off four spades. Everyone is down to seven cards and poor East has to chuck a diamond or heart whereupon South runs off the rest of the tricks.

Stamp saving becoming unstuck

by JILL BETTNER

For almost 80 years, housewives on a budget, teen-agers on an allowance, new brides and the thrifty everywhere have been patiently licking billions of S&H Green Stamps, pasting them into books and saving, saving, saving.

Saving for a new can opener (4½ books), a hair dryer (5½ books) or some other appliance. Saving for a tennis racket (9 books), a set of golf clubs (22½ books) and even luxury items such as a raccoon coat (433 books) or a mini-motor home (4,198 books).

Anybody who has stopped saving the stamps for himself almost certainly is still saving for a friend or relative. Those of us who grew up in families where green stamps were considered almost as valuable as greenbacks wouldn't think of throwing them away — not even the mess all stuck together in the bottom of a kitchen drawer.

Everyone has enough green stamps lying around the house somewhere to fill at least one book despite the number of active savers (or at least redeemers) declining in recent years. Many stores just have stopped giving them away.

IT USED TO BE that many families planned nearly all their purchases around who gave green stamps, buying groceries at a certain store each week, getting gas at a special station and even arranging Saturday night bowling dates at "Green Stamp alleys."

In the last several years, however, businesses of all types quit offering the stamps for one reason or another.

Some dropped them to save the license fee S&H charged to use the stamps. Others simply decided to use the money they would have paid to S&H for other kinds of advertising and promotion.

One by one, National Tea Co. and other major food chain stores in the Chicago area dropped the stamps. Wieboldt's was the only one left where shoppers could still get a few of the once-mighty stamps with their change — until this year.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE of January, Wieboldt officials announced that they, too, would cease issuing the stamps and operating redemption centers in their 13 Chicago-area stores. Wieboldt's had participated in the S&H merchandising program since 1957.

Green stamps were no longer doing the job for Wieboldt's they were supposed to do, according to Arthur Muenze, president of Wieboldt Stores Inc.

"Since all food stores, most gas stations and other businesses had stopped giving the stamps away, public interest had declined to such an extent that offering them no longer was an effective method of bringing people into our stores," he said.

The redemption center in the basement of the Wieboldt's store

at Randhurst Shopping Center, Mount Prospect, will close permanently March 31. The other North suburban center, in the Wieboldt's store in Evanston also will close on that date.

AS OF APRIL 1, green stamp savers in this area will have to travel to Elmwood Park to exchange their books of stamps for merchandise.

The Elmwood Park store, to be located at 7216 W. Grand Ave., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. The store, plus another center opening the same day in Chicago, are the first of several planned by the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. to fill the void created by Wieboldt's decision to close its centers.

An S&H spokesman said it still is impossible to say whether any future centers will be located in the Northwest suburbs. He said the additional redemption facilities will be announced "as fast as locations can be selected and leases negotiated."

THE COMPANY is concerned that some savers in this area appear to be under the mistaken impression that because Wieboldt stores are closing redemption cen-

Are green stamps licked?

A breath of spring, a bit early

It was a day for catching sunbeams, Friday, March 19, 1976.

If you're 5 years old and in kindergarten, you were running your winter-weary heart out on the school playground. Spring fever hits hardest on the young.

"I hope tomorrow will be summer," one child said. "I want to ride my two-wheeler," called back another.

The Northwest suburbs thumbed its nose at the next-to-last official day of winter Friday. Warm southwesterly winds pushed the temperature to the mid-70s by afternoon. The sun was a little friendlier, the sky a little higher.

The men who study these things said the warm weather will fade over the weekend. More clouds and maybe a shower are part of the picture, too.

Officially, Friday's high temperature of 75 degrees fell short of the record 78 for the date set in 1921. But that only mattered to bookkeepers.

For everybody else, Friday's weather was a first-place finish for winter and a welcome harbinger of spring.

A beauty!

A BASKETBALL, a boy and a warm sunny day spell relaxation for Dan Kessenich, an Arlington High School senior who took advantage of Friday's 75-degree weather to practice his jump shot.

In issuing temporary occupancy permits

City to check official's authority

Des Plaines officials have authorized the drafting of an ordinance taking sole authority for issuing temporary occupancy permits away from the city building commissioner.

The new regulations will require approval by several inspectors before the permits are issued.

The city council's building control and inspection committee has recommended the changes to ensure that new and remodeled buildings are safe before tenants and owners are allowed occupancy. The changes were proposed after disclosures that former Building Comm. William Baldacchini had allowed two city firms to move into buildings having numerous fire code violations.

Baldacchini resigned two weeks ago, after being criticized numerous times by aldermen over his handling of matters in the building department. Leonard Trost was appointed acting building commissioner last week.

UNDER THE PROPOSED changes, temporary occupancy permits only would be issued after building, electrical, plumbing, fire, zoning and health inspectors sign reports stating that a given building is safe.

The changes also will allow any inspector with the approval of a supervisor to revoke temporary occupancy permit if any health or safety violations are found later.

The new policy calls for temporary occupancy permits to be issued for 60 days, with the owner of the building allowed one 30-day extension. The city now issues the permits for six months and has no policy on extensions.

Finally, the committee has recommended the city charge a $25 fee per unit for each temporary occupancy permit for residential dwellings, and a $200 fee for permits for commercial, industrial and institutional buildings.

SEVERAL ALDERMEN said they oppose the issuance of temporary occupancy permits and want even more stringent regulations to ensure that buildings are safe before they are occupied.

Ald. Arthur Erbach, 5th, a member of the committee said, however, that "it is not practical to think we can issue no temporary occupancy permits."

"If anything, this is going to make it more difficult to get temporary occupancy permits," he said. "A building is going to have to be virtually complete, except for maybe a few odds and ends before it can be occupied."

City Atty. Charles Hug has been directed to draft an ordinance to include the proposed changes for consideration by the city council at a future meeting.

February food costs drop sharply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices increased at the lowest rate in four years during February as food costs took their sharpest drop since 1956, the Labor Dept. reported Friday.

The 0.1 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index compared to 0.4 per cent in January and a 0.6 per cent average for the last quarter of last year.

This put the index at 167.1, before seasonal adjustment, meaning that goods costing $100 in the 1967 base year went for $167.10 in February.

The February increase was the smallest since September 1971, the department said, and the 1.0 per cent drop in over-all food prices was the biggest downturn since 1956. Foods sold in grocery stores declined in price by 1.5 per cent, compared to a 0.4 per cent drop the previous month.

The February figures bore out predictions by administration economists that inflation would continue easing during the early months of this year, reflecting lower food costs and gradual effects of a sharp drop in overall wholesale prices over the last four months.

PRESIDENT FORD'S press secretary, Ron Nessen, called the report by the Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Labor Statistics "excellent news" and "further evidence that the President's economic policy is working."

But he said, "At the same time I think we all feel a sense of caution. It will be difficult to have such a small increase each month."

The February figures showed that gasoline prices declined while charges for consumer services rose, although at a slower rate than in January.

Prices for some food, notably coffee, increased in February. Restaurant and quick-service meals increased at the same 0.8 per cent rate registered in January.

NONFOOD commodities increased 0.3 per cent, and clothing prices rose moderately.

Judge tells Hearst jury to 'pace' deliberations

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A jury Friday was given the task of deciding whether newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst acted of her own free will when she went into a bank with a gun and helped rob it of $10,680.

The case went to the jurors at 10:48 a.m. after legal instructions by U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The jurors deliberated for five hours and 15 minutes before adjourning for the night just before 5 p.m. They will resume at 9 a.m. Saturday.

In instructing the jurors, Carter told them to pace themselves so they did not become exhausted during the deliberations.

He ordered them to deliberate between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., including Saturday and Sunday, but said he would consider requests from them to continue their discussions into the evening if they wish.

In his instructions, Carter made these main points:

• It is up to the government to prove Miss Hearst is guilty.

• "The presumption of innocence

alone is enough to acquit. The burden is always on the prosecution. It never shifts to the defendant."

• The key question is whether she acted under coercion and duress. If the jury determines that to be the case "You should acquit the accused."

• To bring in a guilty verdict the jury must decide that she is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, which he said must be "a doubt based on reason and common sense."

• The panel can consider the fact that Miss Hearst took the Fifth Amendment 42 times in determining her credibility. But he said they must judge her credibility in the same manner they weigh the testimony of other witnesses.

• Her intentional flight following the robbery is not sufficient proof for a conviction but neither is the fact of her original kidnapping sufficient to prove her innocence.

• The jury should ignore the punishment she will face if found guilty.

Contested races dominate April 10 school elections

All but two school districts in the Northwest suburbs will have contested board-of-education elections April 10 — making 1976 one of the most active election years for schools in recent years.

Both community college districts and all four area high school districts became contested Friday, the last day for the filing of nominating petitions.

Only Des Plaines Dist. 62, which serves central Des Plaines, and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, which serves Prospect Heights and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, will have uncontested elementary school elections.

School closings, teacher cutbacks, enrollment declines and financial deficits have been topics for discussion in most local school districts this year. These and other issues have prompted a number of candidacies.

The following names will appear on the ballot in April:

- Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15: Incumbent Irene Sjøstedt of Hoffman Estates and newcomer E. Erie Jones of Palatine, for one 1-year unexpired seat; incumbent Leland Gibbs of Rolling Meadows and newcomers Patsy Kelly, Ann Koller and Norman Knapp, all of Palatine, for two 3-year seats.

Also taken to the hospital were: Debra Zeimet, 18, of 8424 Crain, Patricia McEvilly, 17, of 8040 Overhill Ave., Cathy Surman, 17, of 8408 Clara Dr., Charlene Golbach, 17, of 8108

At Randhurst Shopping Center

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Businessmen, senior citizens and housewives with restless children got a look at themselves from the inside out Friday at a health fair at Randhurst Shopping Center.

The shoppers milled around more than 40 health care and safety exhibits that comprise the annual fair, which continues until 4 p.m. today at the Mount Prospect shopping center.

The displays attracted the attention of area residents with large, colorful posters of the human body, technical equipment, photographs, movies and demonstrations. The exhibits focused on everything from cancer detection to safety.

"Look here, Mom," yelled one enthusiastic youngster, running toward a table with a life-like female mannequin. Mount Prospect paramedics were using the models to demonstrate the use of mouth-to-mouth and cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

SOME WOMEN looked on in virtual terror while others took up the offer to try the life-saving methods themselves.

"I don't think I could ever do that," one woman said.

"You would do it if you had to, if it meant saving another person's life. It's better than doing nothing at all," one of the paramedics said.

At another end of the mall, Holy Family Hospital technicians and nurses administered tests for blood pressure, blood type and lung condition.

More than 1,500 persons will be tested at Randhurst during the two-day health fair, said James McQuaid public relations director for the Des Plaines hospital.

Most of the residents who are tested are in "good health." The tests indicate abnormalities and determine whether further tests or a visit to the family physician should be pursued, he said.

"IT'S THE FREE screening that seems to be very popular with the people who come to these health fairs. When it's free, everyone is interested in their health. But, the concern for your health should really go beyond that, and that's what we are trying to stress here," McQuaid said.

Nearby, the Mount Prospect Lion's Club was giving free glaucoma testing to detect the eye disease that is common in older persons.

Senior citizens also found literature on health services available to them in the suburbs. The fair is sponsored by the Mount Prospect Junior Woman's Club and the Randhurst Merchants Assn.

"I need to sit down and rest a minute," one weary shopper said to another in front of an exhibit sponsored by the Illinois College of Podiatric Medicine.

"You came to the right place," said one white-jacketed doctor who was giving free foot screenings.

THE MOUNT PROSPECT Police

Dept. showed films on bicycle safety, while Northwest Community Hospital passed out cardboard "doctor's hats" to the children.

There was information on alcoholism, venereal disease, hay fever, heart attacks and abortion.

Most shoppers left the shopping center with a healthy collection of pamphlets and information.

"You know, I didn't realize that a lung test was as easy as blowing air into a tube. And that computer registered it and gave an answer," said one woman, walking out of the mall.

"I wasn't sick when I came in here, but somehow, I feel better," she said.

Arrests near in theft ring probe: IBI

State and federal investigators Friday said they are closing in on an organized theft ring that specializes in stealing trucks and heavy equipment in the Chicago and St. Louis areas.

Thefts connected to the ring have occurred in the Schaumburg, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Libertyville, Mundelein and Addison areas, investigators said.

The arrests of as many as six persons are expected soon, said William Enlow, assistant to Wayne Kerstetter, director of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation.

ENLOW SAID the IBI began the investigation after several firms in the suburban Chicago area reported losing "thousands of dollars worth of heavy equipment weekly to what is believed to be an organized ring of thefts."

An informant supplied information to the bureau on the identity of the thieves, he said.

Enlow declined to identify the area owners, but said most were gravel companies and firms that use heavy semi-trailer and dump trucks.

During January and February, agents followed leads that led to the recovery of a stolen dump truck and semi-tractor near Lake Bluff.

BOTH VEHICLES were stolen from the St. Louis area, he said. The investigation shifted there for a while and St. Louis authorities were brought into the case, Enlow said.

The FBI also joined the probe, he said, when it became clear the case involved interstate transportation of stolen vehicles.

Also found in the St. Louis area were four more vehicles that had been stolen from firms in the North and Northwestern suburbs of Chicago, he said.

A total of $120,000 in heavy equipment has been recovered by investigators.

ters, it's either "now or never" for redeeming green stamps.

"Our stamps are still good and there is no need for consumer alarm," said Richard Reynolds, S&H vice president and regional manager. "We've been in business for 80 years and we've never failed to redeem a stamp."

Even though the major retail outlets in the Chicago area have stopped offering the stamps, there are still a number of small businesses in the Northwest suburbs, particularly service stations, that make them available to customers.

One auto dealer, Cass Ford Inc., Des Plaines, sometimes uses the stamps as a special promotional gimmick. Owner Jim Cass offers two big books of 5,000 stamps each with the purchase of a new car on certain days throughout the year.

"WE DON'T DO IT all the time, but when we do, it seems to help our sales," Cass said. "People still seem to be interested in green stamps."

In all, there are 545 retailers currently giving S&H Green Stamps in Illinois. More than 200 are service stations; 40 drug stores; 35 bowling alleys and 34 food stores. Of the 450 redemption centers in the United States, eight are in Illinois.

At the Randhurst Wieboldt's store last week, the redemption center was crowded with savers, some of whom had brought in armloads of books. It was getting down to slim pickings, but shoppers searched the shelves for items that might be used at home before turning to the long "cash only" lines.

"They're only giving $2 a book, and I really think they're worth more if you get something with them," a Park Ridge woman said.

"I've been saving these stamps for years and believe me, they've come in handy a lot of times. It's too bad they're closing down here. I come here to shop anyway, and it was always so convenient to just bring my stamps along."

"Hardly anybody gives stamps anymore — not like they used to when I was first married 20 years ago," a woman from Morton Grove remarked. "Now it's all cash or credit cards. Maybe green stamps are just part of a passing age."

Linda Diener-Joseph Strezishar

One of the first things Joseph Strezishar did when he stepped onto the ground Jan. 5 after living 36 days atop a pole to raise funds to fight muscular dystrophy was to surprise Linda Bernice Diener with an engagement ring.

Although Joe spent both the Christmas and New Year holidays on the pole, Valentine's Day found him repeating marriage vows with Linda before a six-foot heart in the Des Plaines home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Diener. Joe is the son of Mrs. Ray DeBacker, Wheeling, and Jack Strezishar, Des Plaines.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Strezishar

The 6 p.m. candlelight, double ring service was followed by a reception, also in the Diener home, where a heart-shaped cake, complete with music box, red hearts, white doves and a water fountain, was served to the 60 guests.

FOR HER WEDDING Linda wore a beige voile gown trimmed in lace, and carried red roses with baby's breath. Matron of honor was Linda Bander, Villa Park, and flower girl was the bride's 6-year-old sister, Joeline. Mrs. Bander wore a red and white dotted Swiss gown and carried white roses and baby's breath while Joeline wore a pink gown with white lace overskirt and carried a basket of rose petals.

Best man was Herman Edelson, Des Plaines. Also taking part in the ceremony were the bride's mother, who sang, and her sister, Teresa, who played the guitar and also sang. The groom's father played the accordion and sang at the reception.

Stamp saving becoming unstuck

by JILL BETTNER

For almost 80 years, housewives on a budget, teen-agers on an allowance, new brides and the thrifty everywhere have been patiently licking billions of S&H Green Stamps, pasting them into books and saving, saving, saving.

Saving for a new can opener (4 1/2 books), a hair dryer (5 1/2 books) or some other appliance. Saving for a tennis racket (9 books), a set of golf clubs (22 1/2 books) and even luxury items such as a raccoon coat (433 books) or a mini-motor home (4,198 books).

Anybody who has stopped saving the stamps for himself almost certainly is still saving for a friend or relative. Those of us who grew up in families where green stamps were considered almost as valuable as greenbacks wouldn't think of throwing them away—not even the mess all stuck together in the bottom of a kitchen drawer.

Everyone has enough green stamps lying around the house somewhere to fill at least one book despite the number of active savers (or at least redeemers) declining in recent years. Many stores

just have stopped giving them away.

IT USED TO BE that many families planned nearly all their purchases around who gave green stamps, buying groceries at a certain store each week, getting gas at a special station and even arranging Saturday night bowling dates at "Green Stamp alleys."

In the last several years, however, businesses of all types quit offering the stamps for one reason or another.

Some dropped them to save the license fee S&H charged to use the stamps. Others simply decided to use the money they would have paid to S&H for other kinds of advertising and promotion.

One by one, National Tea Co. and other major food chain stores in the Chicago area dropped the stamps. Wieboldt's was the only one left where shoppers could still get a few of the once-mighty stamps with their change—until this year.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE of January, Wieboldt officials announced that they, too, would cease issuing the stamps and operating redemption centers in their 13 Chicago-area stores. Wieboldt's had participated in the S&H merchandising program since 1957.

Green stamps were no longer doing the job for Wieboldt's they were supposed to do, according to Arthur Muenze, president of Wieboldt Stores Inc.

"Since all food stores, most gas stations and other businesses had stopped giving the stamps away, public interest had declined to such an extent that offering them no longer was an effective method of bringing people into our stores," he said.

The redemption center in the basement of the Wieboldt's store

at Randhurst Shopping Center, Mount Prospect, will close permanently March 31. The other North suburban center, in the Wieboldt's store in Evanston also will close on that date.

AS OF APRIL 1, green stamp savers in this area will have to travel to Elmwood Park to exchange their books of stamps for merchandise.

The Elmwood Park store, to be located at 7216 W. Grand Ave., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. The store, plus another center opening the same day in Chicago, are the first of several planned by the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. to fill the void created by Wieboldt's decision to close its centers.

An S&H spokesman said it still is impossible to say whether any future centers will be located in the Northwest suburbs. He said the additional redemption facilities will be announced "as fast as locations can be selected and leases negotiated."

THE COMPANY is concerned that some savers in this area appear to be under the mistaken impression that because Wieboldt stores are closing redemption cen-

A breath of spring, a bit early

It was a day for catching sunbeams, Friday, March 19, 1976.

If you're 5 years old and in kindergarten, you were running your winter-weary heart out on the school playground. Spring fever hits hardest on the young.

"I hope tomorrow will be summer," one child said. "I want to ride my two-wheeler," called back another.

The Northwest suburbs thumbed its nose at the next-to-last official day of winter Friday. Warm southwesterly winds pushed the temperature to the mid-70s by afternoon. The sun was a little friendlier, the sky a little higher.

The men who study these things said the warm weather will fade over the weekend. More clouds and maybe a shower are part of the picture, too.

Officially, Friday's high temperature of 75 degrees fell short of the record 78 for the date set in 1921. But that only mattered to bookkeepers.

For everybody else, Friday's weather was a first-place finish for winter and a welcome harbinger of spring.

Budget talks to continue

by PAM BIGFORD

A resolution to fire all first-year teachers in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 has been defeated by the board of education, but the board will continue a discussion of budget cutbacks at a special meeting Wednesday.

The board split 3-3 over whether to notify first-year teachers that they would not be rehired next year. Board members Carl Poch, Dee Wells and Vince Battaglia voted yes, while Alan Krinsky, Sallyann Okuno and Melvin Lase voted no. Ronald Sowatzke was absent. A tied motion is defeated.

Supt. Edward Grodsky said budget cutbacks are being considered because of a "combination" of the projected loss of "anywhere from 50 to 100 students" next year and uncertainty over whether the district will receive its anticipated amount of funding from the state.

Grodsky said the district showed a gain of about 35 students at the beginning of this school year, but have since lost about 30 students. The district has 1,687 students. He said a survey of the district shows that enrollment may decline by at least "another 30 or 40" by September.

The district has seven first-year teachers. Grodsky said that normally about 10 teachers resign at the end of each year, but that last year only six resigned. By law, teachers must be notified 60 days before the end of the school year if their contracts are not going to be renewed for the next year.

Grodsky said that if the first-year teachers are eventually fired, they will be given "first consideration" for openings that become available through resignations or through additional state funding. He said, however, that he does not anticipate "any new state funding" unless the formula for state aid changes to increase each district's funds.

The district presently has $490,000 in tax anticipation warrants, a method of borrowing against next year's tax revenue.

Grodsky said the board decided to continue the board meeting to next week to consider other budget reductions, but said there was no indication whether the board would again bring up firing the first-year teachers. He said the administration will present additional information on the financial condition of the district and that additional budget cuts will be considered during the meeting.

Grodsky said the regular meeting will be followed by a committee meeting to discuss the short-and long-range goals of the district.

Dist. 23 axes teacher firing plan

February food costs drop sharply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices increased at the lowest rate in four years during February as food costs took their sharpest drop since 1956, the Labor Dept. reported Friday.

The 0.1 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index compared to 0.4 per cent in January and a 0.6 per cent average for the last quarter of last year.

This put the index at 167.1, before seasonal adjustment, meaning that goods costing $100 in the 1967 base year went for $167.10 in February.

The February increase was the smallest since September 1971, the department said, and the 1.0 per cent drop in over-all food prices was the biggest downturn since 1956. Foods sold in grocery stores declined in price by 1.5 per cent, compared to a 0.4 per cent drop the previous month.

The February figures bore out predictions by administration economists that inflation would continue easing during the early months of this year, reflecting lower food costs and gradual effects of a sharp drop in overall wholesale prices over the last four months.

PRESIDENT FORD's press secretary, Ron Nessen, called the report by the Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Labor Statistics "excellent news" and "further evidence that the President's economic policy is working."

But he said, "At the same time I think we all feel a sense of caution. It will be difficult to have such a small increase each month."

The February figures showed that gasoline prices declined while charges for consumer services rose, although at a slower rate than in January.

Prices for some food, notably coffee, increased in February. Restaurant and quick-service meals increased at the same 0.8 per cent rate registered in January.

NONFOOD commodities increased 0.3 per cent, and clothing prices rose moderately.

Judge tells Hearst jury to 'pace' deliberations

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A jury Friday was given the task of deciding whether newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst acted of her own free will when she went into a bank with a gun and helped rob it of $10,000.

The case went to the jurors at 10:48 a.m. after legal instructions by U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The jurors deliberated for five hours and 15 minutes before adjourning for the night just before 5 p.m. They will resume at 9 a.m. Saturday.

In instructing the jurors, Carter told them to pace themselves so they did not become exhausted during the deliberations.

He ordered them to deliberate between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., including Saturday and Sunday, but said he would consider requests from them to continue their discussions into the evening if they wish.

In his instructions, Carter made these main points:

• It is up to the government to prove Miss Hearst is guilty.

• The presumption of innocence

alone is enough to acquit. The burden is always on the prosecution. It never shifts to the defendant.

• The key question is whether she acted under coercion and duress. If the jury determines that to be the case "You should acquit the accused."

• To bring in a guilty verdict the jury must decide that she is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, which he said must be "a doubt based on reason and common sense."

• The panel can consider the fact that Miss Hearst took the Fifth Amendment 42 times in determining her credibility. But he said they must judge her credibility in the same manner they weigh the testimony of other witnesses.

• Her intentional flight, following the robbery is not sufficient proof for a conviction but neither is the fact of her original kidnapping sufficient to prove her innocence.

• The jury should ignore the punishment she will face if found guilty.

Contested races dominate April 10 school elections

All but two school districts in the Northwest suburbs will have contested board-of-education elections April 10 — making 1976 one of the most active election years for schools in recent years.

Both community college districts and all four area high school districts became contested Friday, the last day for the filing of nominating petitions.

Only Des Plaines Dist. 62, which serves central Des Plaines, and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, which serves Prospect Heights and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, will have uncontested elementary school elections.

School closings, teacher cutbacks, enrollment declines and financial deficits have been topics for discussion in most local school districts this year. These and other issues have prompted a number of candidacies.

The following names will appear on the ballot in April:

• Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist.

15: Incumbent Irene Sjostedt of Hoffman Estates and newcomer E. Erie Jones of Palatine, for one 1-year unexpired seat; incumbent Leland Gibbs of Rolling Meadows and newcomers Patsy Kelly, Ann Koller and Norman Knapp, all of Palatine, for two 3-year seats.

• Wheeling-Elmhurst Dist. 21: Incumbents Barbara Farr and Kenneth Rodeck, of Wheeling, and Steven Greenberg of Arlington Heights and newcomers Elaine Bond, Fred Harms, Linda Sprechman, all of Arlington Heights, James Gallagher of Wheeling and Barbara Gloyd of Buffalo Grove, for three 3-year seats.

• Prospect Heights Dist. 23: incumbents Sallyann Okune of Prospect Heights and Alan Krinsky of Arlington Heights, for two 3-year seats.

Wanner of Mount Prospect, for three, 3-year terms.

• River Trails Dist. 26: Incumbents William Haase and Peggy Golden, and newcomer Patrick Fauceglia, all of Mount Prospect, for two 3-year seats.

• Schaumburg Township Dist. 54: Incumbents Edward Bedard and Gordon Thoren, both of Hoffman Estates, and newcomers Leslie Kleiman, Nick Rizzo, Norman Katz, all of Hoffman Estates, Mary Lund, Claudia Bartholomew, Isolda Smith, Dennis Watts, all of Schaumburg, Arlene Czajkowski of Roselle, Elizabeth Carpenter of Hanover Park, for three 3-year terms. Newcomer John Morrow of Hoffman Estates filed incomplete candidate papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

• Mount Prospect Dist. 57: Incumbents Martha Rotelli, David Klundal, and Peter Olesen and newcomers George Montalano and Eugene Bradtko, all of Mount Prospect, for three, 3-year terms.

• Elk Grove Township Dist. 59: Incumbents Emil Bahnmaier of Mount Prospect, Judith Zanca of Des Plaines and Erwin Poklacki of Arlington Heights; and newcomer Charles B. Canupp Jr. of Elk Grove Village, for three 3-year terms.

• Des Plaines Dist. 62: Incumbent Richard Birchfield and newcomer James N. Kosmopod, both of Des Plaines, for two 3-year terms.

• East Meade Dist. 63: Incumbent Larry Reiss of Morton Grove and newcomers Roberta Morris of Park Ridge, Ann Sostrin of Morton Grove, Richard Smith of Niles, and Jeanne Oestreich of Morton Grove, for three 3-year terms.

Schmidt, both of Mundelein for two 3-year terms. Newcomer Charles J. Klinger of Lincolnshire, filed incomplete candidacy papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

• High School Dist. 211: Incumbent Robert Creek of Inverness; and newcomers Richard Gillette and Glenn

Hargrave, both of Palatine, for two 3-year terms.

Deadline for getting name on plaque near

The Wheeling Beautification Committee has set an April 1 deadline for residents wishing to have their names engraved on a special Bicentennial plaque.

The plaque, which will bear the names of contributors of $100 or more, will be placed in the village hall next year. Proceeds from the contributions will be used for Bicentennial beautification projects.

Approval of wooden decks at 'Whipple' up to county

Wheeling officials will permit construction of wooden decks in the Whipple Tree Village mobile home park, 525 McHenry rd., if the Cook County Health Dept. does not object.

Wheeling trustees this week agreed to allow wooden decks in the mobile home park despite a county ordinance prohibiting such structures. Village Mgr. George Passolt said there is no safety hazard with wooden decks if there is a 10-foot separation between structures.

"Neither the fire chief nor the building director feel wooden decks present any great hazard. If the county will give us a letter saying they don't object, I'm more than happy to allow it," Passolt said.

WOODEN DECKS, porches and enclosed garages were among safety and building code violations cited by Cook County Health Dept. officials during an inspection of the mobile home park last year.

Village officials have been meeting with Whipple Tree Village residents in an attempt to resolve the dispute over the structures. The village is trying to find a solution because residents believed they were within the law when they built the decks and garages. Past village administrations did not cite the residents for the alleged violations.

Walter Repholz, village building director, also said he can see "no hazards with wooden decks" as long as there is a 10-foot separation between the structures. He said the only reason he objects to mobile home park residents building wooden decks is the county's requirement that the structures be made from fire resistant materials.

"I've contacted several neighboring communities and their definition of 'fire resistant' is materials that won't support combustion. That means steel, concrete or masonry products. It doesn't include wood," he said.

TRUSTEE GILBERT Monson, chairman of the real estate and zoning committee, said county officials refuse to define the term "fire resistant materials."

"It's like a hot potato. The county doesn't want to accept responsibility, and the village is trying to determine the safest possible thing," he said.

Trustee William Hein said the county mobile home code is discriminatory since single family homeowners in the village are allowed to build wooden decks and porches.

The board asked the village attorney to prepare a draft of a proposed mobile home park ordinance allowing wooden structures. Board members agreed the ordinance will be passed if the county files no objections within 15 days.

Health fair gives 'inside' story

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Businessmen, senior citizens and housewives with restless children got a look at themselves from the inside out Friday at a health fair at Randhurst Shopping Center.

The shoppers milled around more than 40 health care and safety exhibits that comprise the annual fair, which continues until 4 p.m. today at the Mount Prospect shopping center.

The displays attracted the attention of area residents with large, colorful posters of the human body, technical equipment, photographs, movies and demonstrations. The exhibits focused on everything from cancer detection to safety.

"Look here, Mom," yelled one enthusiastic youngster, running toward a table with a life-like female mannequin. Mount Prospect paramedics were using the models to demonstrate the use of mouth-to-mouth and cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

SOME WOMEN looked on in virtual terror while others took up the offer to try the life-saving methods themselves.

"I don't think I could ever do that," one woman said.

"You would do it if you had to, if it meant saving another person's life. It's better than doing nothing at all," one of the paramedics said.

At another end of the mall, Holy Family Hospital technicians and nurses administered tests for blood pressure, blood type and lung condition.

More than 1,500 persons will be tested at Randhurst during the two-day health fair, said James McQuaid public relations director for the Des Plaines hospital.

Most of the residents who are tested are in "good health." The tests indicate abnormalities and determine whether further tests or a visit to the family physician should be pursued, he said.

"IT'S THE FREE screening that seems to be very popular with the people who come to these health fairs. When it's free, everyone is interested in their health. But, the concern for your health should really go beyond that, and that's what we are trying to stress here," McQuaid said.

Nearby, the Mount Prospect Lion's Club was giving free glaucoma testing to detect the eye disease that is common in older persons.

Senior citizens also found literature on health services available to them in the suburbs. The fair is sponsored by the Mount Prospect Junior Woman's Club and the Randhurst Merchants Assn.

"I need to sit down and rest a minute," one weary shopper said to another in front of an exhibit sponsored by the Illinois College of Podiatric Medicine.

"You came to the right place," said

one white-jacketed doctor who was giving free foot screenings.

THE MOUNT PROSPECT Police Dept. showed films on bicycle safety, while Northwest Community Hospital passed out cardboard "doctor's hats" to the children.

There was information on alcoholism, venereal disease, hay fever, heart attacks and abortion.

Most shoppers left the shopping center with a healthy collection of pamphlets and information.

"You know, I didn't realize that a lung test was as easy as blowing air into a tube. And that computer registered it and gave an answer," said one woman, walking out of the mall.

"I wasn't sick when I came in here, but somehow, I feel better," she said.

ters, it's either "now or never" for redeeming green stamps.

"Our stamps are still good and there is no need for consumer alarm," said Richard Reynolds, S&H vice president and regional manager. "We've been in business for 80 years and we've never failed to redeem a stamp."

Even though the major retail outlets in the Chicago area have stopped offering the stamps, there are still a number of small businesses in the Northwest suburbs, particularly service stations, that make them available to customers.

One auto dealer, Cass Ford Inc., Des Plaines, sometimes uses the stamps as a special promotional gimmick. Owner Jim Cass offers two big books of 5,000 stamps each with the purchase of a new car on certain days throughout the year.

"WE DON'T DO IT all the time, but when we do, it seems to help our sales," Cass said. "People still seem to be interested in green stamps."

In all, there are 545 retailers currently giving S&H Green Stamps in Illinois. More than 200 are service stations; 40 drug stores; 35 bowling alleys and 34 food stores. Of the 430 redemption centers in the United States, eight are in Illinois.

At the Randhurst Wieboldt's store last week, the redemption center was crowded with savers, some of whom had brought in armloads of books. It was getting down to slim pickings, but shoppers searched the shelves for items that might be used at home before turning to the long "cash only" lines.

"They're only giving $2 a book, and I really think they're worth more if you get something with them," a Park Ridge woman said.

"I've been saving these stamps for years and believe me, they've come in handy a lot of times. It's too bad they're closing down here. I come here to shop anyway, and it was always so convenient to just bring my stamps along."

"Hardly anybody gives stamps anymore — not like they used to when I was first married 20 years ago," a woman from Morton Grove remarked. "Now it's all cash or credit cards. Maybe green stamps are just part of a passing age."

2 more enter race in Prospect Heights

Benedict A. Solis, 500 Grego Ct., and Patrick W. Ludvigsen, 10 N. Prospect Ct., have filed as aldermanic candidates in the May 22 election of Prospect Heights city officials. More than 30 persons have filed for posts on the new city council.

Solis, 42, is president of Sprucewood Builders Inc. and All Building and Carpentry Inc., both of Prospect Heights.

He and his wife, Laura, have three children and have lived in Prospect Heights for 12 years. He has 20 years of commercial and industrial building experience.

Ludvigsen, 29, is a sheet metal worker for Palomar Co., Chicago. He was raised in Prospect Heights and attended the Washburn Trade School, Chicago.

He and his wife, Paulette, have two children and have lived in Prospect Heights for nine years.

by JILL BETTNER

For almost 60 years, housewives on a budget, teen-agers on an allowance, new brides and the thrifty everywhere have been patiently licking billions of S&H Green Stamps, pasting them into books and saving, saving, saving.

Saving for a new can opener (4½ books), a hair dryer (5½ books) or some other appliance. Saving for a tennis racket (9 books), a set of golf clubs (22½ books) and even luxury items such as a raccoon coat (433 books) or a mini-motor home (4,198 books).

Anybody who has stopped saving the stamps for himself almost certainly is still saving for a friend or relative. Those of us who grew up in families where green stamps were considered almost as valuable as greenbacks wouldn't think of throwing them away — not even the mess all stuck together in the bottom of a kitchen drawer.

Everyone has enough green stamps lying around the house somewhere to fill at least one book despite the number of active savers (or at least redeemers) declining in recent years. Many stores just have stopped giving them away.

IT USED TO BE that many families planned nearly all their purchases around who gave green stamps, buying groceries at a certain store each week, getting gas at a special station and even arranging Saturday night bowling dates at "Green Stamp alleys."

In the last several years, however, businesses of all types quit offering the stamps for one reason or another.

Some dropped them to save the license fee S&H charged to use the stamps. Others simply decided to use the money they would have paid to S&H for other kinds of advertising and promotion.

One by one, National Tea Co. and other major food chain stores in the Chicago area dropped the stamps. Wieboldt's was the only one left where shoppers could still get a few of the once-mighty stamps with their change — until this year.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE of January, Wieboldt officials announced that they, too, would cease issuing the stamps and operating redemption centers in their 13 Chicago-area stores. Wieboldt's had participated in the S&H merchandising program since 1957.

Green stamps were no longer doing the job for Wieboldt's they were supposed to do, according to Arthur Muenze, president of Wieboldt Stores Inc.

"Since all food stores, most gas stations and other businesses had stopped giving the stamps away, public interest had declined to such an extent that offering them no longer was an effective method of bringing people into our stores," he said.

The redemption center in the basement of the Wieboldt's store

at Randhurst Shopping Center, Mount Prospect, will close permanently March 31. The other North suburban center, in the Wieboldt's store in Evanston also will close on that date.

AS OF APRIL 1, green stamp savers in this area will have to travel to Elmwood Park to exchange their books of stamps for merchandise.

The Elmwood Park store, to be located at 7216 W. Grand Ave., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. The store, plus another center opening the same day in Chicago, are the first of several planned by the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. to fill the void created by Wieboldt's decision to close its centers.

An S&H spokesman said it still is impossible to say whether any future centers will be located in the Northwest suburbs. He said the additional redemption facilities will be announced "as fast as locations can be selected and leases negotiated."

THE COMPANY is concerned that some savers in this area appear to be under the mistaken impression that because Wieboldt stores are closing redemption cen-

Are green stamps licked?

A breath of spring, a bit early

It was a day for catching sunbeams, Friday, March 19, 1976.

If you're 5 years old and in kindergarten, you were running your winter-weary heart out on the school playground. Spring fever hits hardest on the young.

"I hope tomorrow will be summer," one child said. "I want to ride my two-wheeler," called back another.

The Northwest suburbs thumbed its nose at the next-to-last official day of winter Friday. Warm southwesterly winds pushed the temperature to the mid-70s by afternoon. The sun was a little friendlier, the sky a little higher.

The men who study these things said the warm weather will fade over the weekend. More clouds and maybe a shower are part of the picture, too.

Faces village review Monday

Hearing on Surety project

A 65-acre single-family development near Strathmore Grove in Lake County will be reviewed by the Buffalo Grove Village Board at a public hearing Monday night.

The board will conduct the hearing at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 150 Raupp Blvd.

The project is planned by Surety Builders of Bollingbrook at the northeast corner of Ill. Rte. 83 and Busch Road. The development would include 193 single-family homes and house an estimated 786 residents.

Surety's plans include an extension of Thompson Boulevard in Strathmore Grove to serve as the major thoroughfare in the development. A second major street, Brandywyn Lane, would run north and south and connect near Rte. 83 on the south and a proposed school site on the north.

Surety plans a park donation of approximately six acres, with approximately five acres available for recreation, said Richard Kaufman, Surety vice president.

The park donation will include a one-acre lot at the northeast corner of the property, which will adjoin the Strathmore Grove subdivision.

A larger park area at the southeast corner of the property will include two acres to be used for water retention during heavy storms.

Although both the lot and the park land donation at the southeast corner will be located next to detention areas, Kaufman said the adjoining park land will be above water at all times.

A 'McConcert' slated at you know where

The Wheeling High School Band will present a concert at 1 p.m. Sunday in the parking lot of McDonald's Restaurant, 188 E. Dundee Rd.

The concert was to have been the band's last before leaving for Sao Paulo, Brazil to represent Illinois in a Bicentennial trade fair, but not enough funds were raised to make the trip.

February food costs drop sharply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices increased at the lowest rate in four years during February as food costs took their sharpest drop since 1956, the Labor Dept. reported Friday.

The 0.1 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index compared to 0.4 per cent in January and a 0.6 per cent average for the last quarter of last year.

This put the index at 167.1, before seasonal adjustment, meaning that goods costing $100 in the 1967 base year went for $167.10 in February.

The February increase was the smallest since September 1971, the department said, and the 1.0 per cent drop in over-all food prices was the biggest downturn since 1956. Foods sold in grocery stores declined in price by 1.5 per cent, compared to a 0.4 per cent drop the previous month.

The February figures bore out predictions by administration economists that inflation would continue easing during the early months of this year, reflecting lower food costs and gradual effects of a sharp drop in overall wholesale prices over the last four months.

PRESIDENT FORD's press secretary, Ron Nessen, called the report by the Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Labor Statistics "excellent news" and "further evidence that the President's economic policy is working."

But he said, "At the same time I think we all feel a sense of caution. It will be difficult to have such a small increase each month."

The February figures showed that gasoline prices declined while charges for consumer services rose, although at a slower rate than in January.

Prices for some food, notably coffee, increased in February. Restaurant and quick-service meals increased at the same 0.8 per cent rate registered in January.

NONFOOD commodities increased 0.3 per cent, and clothing prices rose moderately.

Judge tells Hearst jury to 'pace' deliberations

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A jury Friday was given the task of deciding whether newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst acted of her own free will when she went into a bank with a gun and helped rob it of $10,690.

The case went to the jurors at 10:48 a.m. after legal instructions by U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The jurors deliberated for five hours and 15 minutes before adjourning for the night just before 5 p.m. They will resume at 9 a.m. Saturday.

In instructing the jurors, Carter told them to pace themselves so they did not become exhausted during the deliberations.

He ordered them to deliberate between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., including Saturday and Sunday, but said he would consider requests from them to continue their discussions into the evening if they wish.

In his instructions, Carter made these main points:

• It is up to the government to prove Miss Hearst is guilty.

"The presumption of innocence

alone is enough to acquit. The burden is always on the prosecution. It never shifts to the defendant."

• The key question is whether she acted under coercion and duress. If the jury determines that to be the case "You should acquit the accused."

• To bring in a guilty verdict the jury must decide that she is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, which he said must be "a doubt based on reason and common sense."

• The panel can consider the fact that Miss Hearst took the Fifth Amendment 42 times in determining her credibility. But he said they must judge her credibility in the same manner they weigh the testimony of other witnesses.

• Her intentional flight following the robbery is not sufficient proof for a conviction but neither is the fact of her original kidnapping sufficient to prove her innocence.

• The jury should ignore the punishment she will face if found guilty.

In April elections

Most school races contested

All but two school districts in the Northwest suburbs will have contested board-of-education elections April 10 — making 1976 one of the most active election years for schools in recent years.

Both community college districts and all four area high school districts became contested Friday, the last day for the filing of nominating petitions.

Only Des Plaines Dist. 62, which serves central Des Plaines, and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, which serves Prospect Heights and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, will have uncontested elementary school elections.

School closings, teacher cutbacks, enrollment declines and financial deficits have been topics for discussion in most local school districts this year. These and other issues have prompted a number of candidacies.

The following names will appear on the ballot in April:

• Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15: Incumbent Irene Sjoestedt of Hoffman Estates and newcomer E. Eric Jones of Palatine, for one 1-year unexpired seat; incumbent Leland Gibbs of Rolling Meadows and newcomers Patsy Kelly, Ann Koller and Norman Knapp, all of Palatine, for two 3-year terms.

• Wheeling-Elmhurst Dist. 21: Incumbents Barbara Farr and Kenneth Rodeck, of Wheeling, and Steven Greenberg of Arlington Heights and Newcomer John Morrow of Hoffman Estates filed incomplete candidate papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

• Mount Prospect Dist. 57: Incumbents Martha Rotelli, David Kluxdal, and Peter Olesen and newcomers George Montalbano and Eugene Bradtke, all of Mount Prospect, for three, 3-year terms.

At Randhurst Shopping Center

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Businessmen, senior citizens and housewives with restless children got a look at themselves from the inside out Friday at a health fair at Randhurst Shopping Center.

The shoppers milled around more than 40 health care and safety exhibits that comprise the annual fair, which continues until 4 p.m. today at the Mount Prospect shopping center.

The displays attracted the attention of area residents with large, colorful posters of the human body, technical equipment, photographs, movies and demonstrations. The exhibits focused on everything from cancer detection to safety.

"Look here, Mom," yelled one enthusiastic youngster, running toward a table with a life-like female mannequin. Mount Prospect paramedics were using the models to demonstrate the use of mouth-to-mouth and cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

SOME WOMEN looked on in virtual terror while others took up the offer to try the life-saving methods themselves.

"I don't think I could ever do that," one woman said.

"You would do it if you had to, if it meant saving another person's life. It's better than doing nothing at all," one of the paramedics said.

At another end of the mall, Holy Family Hospital technicians and nurses administered tests for blood pressure, blood type and lung condition.

More than 1,500 persons will be tested at Randhurst during the two-day health fair, said James McQuaid, public relations director for the Des Plaines hospital.

Most of the residents who are tested are in "good health." The tests indicate abnormalities and determine whether further tests or a visit to the family physician should be pursued, he said.

"IT'S THE FREE screening that seems to be very popular with the people who come to these health fairs. When it's free, everyone is interested in their health. But, the concern for your health should really go beyond that, and that's what we are trying to stress here," McQuaid said.

Nearby, the Mount Prospect Lion's Club was giving free glaucoma testing to detect the eye disease that is common in older persons.

Senior citizens also found literature on health services available to them in the suburbs. The fair is sponsored by the Mount Prospect Junior Woman's Club and the Randhurst Merchants Assn.

"I need to sit down and rest a minute," one weary shopper said to another in front of an exhibit sponsored by the Illinois College of Podiatric Medicine.

"You came to the right place," said one white-jacketed doctor who was giving free foot screenings.

THE MOUNT PROSPECT Police Dept. showed films on bicycle safety, while Northwest Community Hospital passed out cardboard "doctor's hats" to the children.

There was information on alcoholism, venereal disease, hay fever, heart attacks and abortion.

Most shoppers left the shopping center with a healthy collection of pamphlets and information.

"You know, I didn't realize that a lung test was as easy as blowing air into a tube. And that computer registered it and gave an answer," said one woman, walking out of the mall.

"I wasn't sick when I came in here, but somehow, I feel better," she said.

Stamp saving becoming unstuck

ters, it's either "now or never" for redeeming green stamps.

"Our stamps are still good and there is no need for consumer alarm," said Richard Reynolds, S&H vice president and regional manager. "We've been in business for 80 years and we've never failed to redeem a stamp."

Even though the major retail outlets in the Chicago area have stopped offering the stamps, there are still a number of small businesses in the Northwest suburbs, particularly service stations, that make them available to customers.

One auto dealer, Cass Ford Inc., Des Plaines, sometimes uses the stamps as a special promotional gimmick. Owner Jim Cass offers two big books of 5,000 stamps each with the purchase of a new car on certain days throughout the year.

"WE DON'T DO IT all the time, but when we do, it seems to help our sales," Cass said. "People still seem to be interested in green stamps."

In all, there are 545 retailers currently giving S&H Green Stamps in Illinois. More than 200 are service stations; 40 drug stores; 35 bowling alleys and 34 food stores. Of the 450 redemption centers in the United States, eight are in Illinois.

At the Randhurst Wieboldt's store last week, the redemption center was crowded with savers, some of whom had brought in armloads of books. It was getting down to slim pickings, but shoppers searched the shelves for items that might be used at home before turning to the long "cash only" lines.

"They're only giving $2 a book, and I really think they're worth more if you get something with them," a Park Ridge woman said.

"I've been saving these stamps for years and believe me, they've come in handy a lot of times. It's too bad they're closing down here. I come here to shop anyway, and it was always so convenient to just bring my stamps along."

"Hardly anybody gives stamps anymore — not like they used to when I was first married 20 years ago," a woman from Morton Grove remarked. "Now it's all cash or credit cards. Maybe green stamps are just part of a passing age."

Stamp saving becoming unstuck

by JILL BETTNER

For almost 80 years, housewives on a budget, teen-agers on an allowance, new brides and the thrifty everywhere have been patiently licking billions of S&H Green Stamps, pasting them into books and saving, saving, saving.

Saving for a new can opener (4½ books), a hair dryer (5½ books) or some other appliance. Saving for a tennis racket (9 books), a set of golf clubs (22½ books) and even luxury items such as a raccoon coat (433 books) or a mini-motor home (4,198 books).

Anybody who has stopped saving the stamps for himself almost certainly is still saving for a friend or relative. Those of us who grew up in families where green stamps were considered almost as valuable as greenbacks wouldn't think of throwing them away — not even the mess all stuck together in the bottom of a kitchen drawer.

Everyone has enough green stamps lying around the house somewhere to fill at least one book despite the number of active savers (or at least redeemers) declining in recent years. Many stores just have stopped giving them away.

IT USED TO BE that many families planned nearly all their purchases around who gave green stamps, buying groceries at a certain store each week, getting gas at a special station and even arranging Saturday night bowling dates at "Green Stamp alleys."

In the last several years, however, businesses of all types quit offering the stamps for one reason or another.

Some dropped them to save the license fee S&H charged to use the stamps. Others simply decided to use the money they would have paid to S&H for other kinds of advertising and promotion.

One by one, National Tea Co. and other major food chain stores in the Chicago area dropped the stamps. Wieboldt's was the only one left where shoppers could still get a few of the once-mighty stamps with their change — until this year.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE of January, Wieboldt officials announced that they, too, would cease issuing the stamps and operating redemption centers in their 13 Chicago-area stores. Wieboldt's had participated in the S&H merchandising program since 1957.

Green stamps were no longer doing the job for Wieboldt's they were supposed to do, according to Arthur Muenze, president of Wieboldt Stores Inc.

"Since all food stores, most gas stations and other businesses had stopped giving the stamps away, public interest had declined to such an extent that offering them no longer was an effective method of bringing people into our stores," he said.

The redemption center in the basement of the Wieboldt's store

at Randhurst Shopping Center, Mount Prospect, will close permanently March 31. The other North suburban center, in the Wieboldt's store in Evanston also will close on that date.

AS OF APRIL 1, green stamp savers in this area will have to travel to Elmwood Park to exchange their books of stamps for merchandise.

The Elmwood Park store, to be located at 7216 W. Grand Ave., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. The store, plus another center opening the same day in Chicago, are the first of several planned by the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. to fill the void created by Wieboldt's decision to close its centers.

An S&H spokesman said it still is impossible to say whether any future centers will be located in the Northwest suburbs. He said the additional redemption facilities will be announced "as fast as locations can be selected and leases negotiated."

THE COMPANY is concerned that some savers in this area appear to be under the mistaken impression that because Wieboldt stores are closing redemption cen-

Are green stamps licked?

A breath of spring, a bit early

It was a day for catching sunbeams, Friday, March 19, 1976.

If you're 5 years old and in kindergarten, you were running your winter-weary heart out on the school playground. Spring fever hits hardest on the young.

"I hope tomorrow will be summer," one child said. "I want to ride my two-wheeler" called back another.

The Northwest suburbs thumbed its nose at the next-to-last official day of winter Friday. Warm southwesterly winds pushed the temperature to the mid-70s by afternoon. The sun was a little friendlier, the sky a little higher.

The men who study these things said the warm weather will fade over the weekend. More clouds and maybe a shower are part of the picture, too.

Report to village board

Unit school update Tuesday

A representative of the Unit District Citizens' Committee of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 will appear next week before the Elk Grove Village Board to discuss the status of the unit district study.

Leah Cummings, a member of the citizens' committee, said Friday she will meet with the board Tuesday to present information that the committee has gathered to date.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m., immediately preceding the regular village board meeting in the municipal building, 901 Wellington Ave.

THE UNIT DISTRICT study was completed three years ago with a recommendation that the concept be studied again at a later date. The study was resurrected several months ago by the school district, and the citizens' committee expects to have a recommendation ready for the board in April.

Thomas Guy, chairman of the committee, may attend the meeting briefly, Mrs. Cummings said.

"I want to bring the village board up to date on some of the things we have discussed," she said. "I want to give them some questions to consider before they take a stand, if they do."

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel said Friday she discussed with Mrs. Cummings holding the meeting, but added she did not expect the village board to take a stand on the unit district matter.

"I personally think we won't take a position," she said.

The unit district committee is studying the formation of a unit school district in the area currently served by Dist. 59. A unit district would have one school board and administration governing elementary and high schools. Currently, Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts in High School Dist. 214.

Mrs. Cummings said the committee has reached "no real conclusions," but she added "some critical stages" in the study are nearing.

'Meet the Sting' today

"Meet the Sting" day will be held at 1 p.m. today at the Grant Wood School gym when the public will be invited to meet members of the Chicago Sting soccer team.

A film on the team will be shown and an instructional clinic will follow. Residents 8 through 16 years of age can register Saturday for the park district's spring soccer program.

Stamp saving becoming unstuck

ters, it's either "now or never" for redeeming green stamps.

"Our stamps are still good and there is no need for consumer alarm," said Richard Reynolds, S&H vice president and regional manager. "We've been in business for 80 years and we've never failed to redeem a stamp."

Even though the major retail outlets in the Chicago area have stopped offering the stamps, there are still a number of small businesses in the Northwest suburbs, particularly service stations, that make them available to customers.

One auto dealer, Cass Ford Inc., Des Plaines, sometimes uses the stamps as a special promotional gimmick. Owner Jim Cass offers two big books of 5,000 stamps each with the purchase of a new car on certain days throughout the year.

"WE DON'T DO IT all the time, but when we do, it seems to help our sales," Cass said. "People still seem to be interested in green stamps."

In all, there are 545 retailers currently giving S&H Green Stamps in Illinois. More than 200 are service stations; 40 drug stores; 35 bowling alleys and 34 food stores. Of the 450 redemption centers in the United States, eight are in Illinois.

At the Randhurst Wieboldt's store last week, the redemption center was crowded with savers, some of whom had brought in armloads of books. It was getting down to slim pickings, but shoppers searched the shelves for items that might be used at home before turning to the long "cash only" lines.

"They're only giving $2 a book, and I really think they're worth more if you get something with them," a Park Ridge woman said.

"I've been saving these stamps for years and believe me, they've come in handy a lot of times. It's too bad they're closing down here. I come here to shop anyway, and it was always so convenient to just bring my stamps along."

"Hardly anybody gives stamps anymore — not like they used to when I was first married 20 years ago," a woman from Morton Grove remarked. "Now it's all cash or credit cards. Maybe green stamps are just part of a passing age."

Stamp saving becoming unstuck

by JILL BETTNER

For almost 80 years, housewives on a budget, teen-agers on an allowance, new brides and the thrifty everywhere have been patiently licking billions of S&H Green Stamps, pasting them into books and saving, saving, saving.

Saving for a new can opener (4½ books), a hair dryer (5½ books) or some other appliance. Saving for a tennis racket (9 books), a set of golf clubs (22½ books) and even luxury items such as a raccoon coat (433 books) or a mini-motor home (4,198 books).

Anybody who has stopped saving the stamps for himself almost certainly is still saving for a friend or relative. Those of us who grew up in families where green stamps were considered almost as valuable as greenbacks wouldn't think of throwing them away — not even the mess all stuck together in the bottom of a kitchen drawer.

Everyone has enough green stamps lying around the house somewhere to fill at least one book despite the number of active savers (or at least redeemers) declining in recent years. Many stores just have stopped giving them away.

IT USED TO BE that many families planned nearly all their purchases around who gave green stamps, buying groceries at a certain store each week, getting gas at a special station and even arranging Saturday night bowling dates at "Green Stamp alleys."

In the last several years, however, businesses of all types quit offering the stamps for one reason or another.

Some dropped them to save the license fee S&H charged to use the stamps. Others simply decided to use the money they would have paid to S&H for other kinds of advertising and promotion.

One by one, National Tea Co. and other major food chain stores in the Chicago area dropped the stamps. Wieboldt's was the only one left where shoppers could still get a few of the once-mighty stamps with their change — until this year.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE of January, Wieboldt officials announced that they, too, would cease issuing the stamps and operating redemption centers in their 13 Chicago-area stores. Wieboldt's had participated in the S&H merchandising program since 1967.

Green stamps were no longer doing the job for Wieboldt's they were supposed to do, according to Arthur Muenze, president of Wieboldt Stores Inc.

"Since all food stores, most gas stations and other businesses had stopped giving the stamps away, public interest had declined to such an extent that offering them no longer was an effective method of bringing people into our stores," he said.

The redemption center in the basement of the Wieboldt's store

at Randhurst Shopping Center, Mount Prospect, will close permanently March 31. The other North suburban center, in the Wieboldt's store in Evanston also will close on that date.

AS OF APRIL 1, green stamp savers in this area will have to travel to Elmwood Park to exchange their books of stamps for merchandise.

The Elmwood Park store, to be located at 7216 W. Grand Ave., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. The store, plus another center opening the same day in Chicago, are the first of several planned by the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. to fill the void created by Wieboldt's decision to close its centers.

An S&H spokesman said it still is impossible to say whether any future centers will be located in the Northwest suburbs. He said the additional redemption facilities will be announced "as fast as locations can be selected and leases negotiated."

THE COMPANY is concerned that some savers in this area appear to be under the mistaken impression that because Wieboldt stores are closing redemption cen-

Are green stamps licked?

A breath of spring, a bit early

It was a day for catching sunbeams, Friday, March 19, 1976.

If you're 5 years old and in kindergarten, you were running your winter-weary heart out on the school playground. Spring fever hits hardest on the young.

"I hope tomorrow will be summer," one child said. "I want to ride my two-wheeler," called back another.

The Northwest suburbs thumbed its nose at the next-to-last official day of winter Friday. Warm southwesterly winds pushed the temperature to the mid-70s by afternoon. The sun was a little friendlier, the sky a little higher.

The men who study these things said the warm weather will fade over the weekend. More clouds and maybe a shower are part of the picture, too.

Officially, Friday's high temperature of 75 degrees fell short of the record 78 for the date set in 1921. But that only mattered to bookkeepers.

For everybody else, Friday's weather was a first-place finish for winter and a welcome harbinger of spring.

A beauty!

A BASKETBALL, a boy and a warm sunny day spell relaxation for Dan Kessenich, an Arlington High School senior who took advantage of Friday's 75-degree weather to practice his jump shot.

Immediate, future needs sought

Parks to survey residents

An attitude-and-interest survey on the Hoffman Estates Park District will be distributed to residents beginning March 27.

Senior citizens unit topic of meeting

Schaumburg Township Auditor Walter P. Wing Jr. will meet with the proposed senior citizens council at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the township office, 105 S. Roselle Rd. Wing is chairman of the township senior citizens committee.

The survey will be conducted through April to learn residents' opinions on immediate and future park needs and to update the park master plan, Park Director Allen Binder said.

"The people distributing the surveys will give one at every third household, if an adult answers the door," Binder said. "We are asking the resident for 15 minutes of his time to fill out the questionnaire. Someone will be by to pick it up either later in the afternoon or the next day."

The survey is being distributed by members of six Hoffman Estates parents-teachers associations and the Winston Knolls Homeowners' Assn.

Binder said he expects a 25 per cent return, with the final results coming about June 1.

"We're still looking for groups to assist us in the distribution of surveys at Parcel C, south of Golf Road and west of Roselle Road," he added.

"Right now, our only outstanding cost will be for an outside professional firm to analyze the information for us," Binder said.

The survey contains questions on rating current district services, the amount of individual participation in programs and on residents' opinions on program priorities.

Conant jazz band in concert today

The Conant High School Jazz Band will present a concert at 7:30 p.m. today in the school gymnasium, 700 E. Cougar Tr., Hoffman Estates. Admission will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

February food costs drop sharply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices increased at the lowest rate in four years during February as food costs took their sharpest drop since 1956, the Labor Dept. reported Friday.

The 0.1 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index compared to 0.4 per cent in January and a 0.6 per cent average for the last quarter of last year.

This put the index at 167.1, before seasonal adjustment, meaning that goods costing $100 in the 1967 base year went for $167.10 in February.

The February increase was the smallest since September 1971, the department said, and the 1.0 per cent drop in over-all food prices was the biggest downturn since 1956. Foods sold in grocery stores declined in price by 1.5 per cent, compared to a 0.4 per cent drop the previous month.

The February figures bore out predictions by administration economists that inflation would continue easing during the early months of this year, reflecting lower food costs and gradual effects of a sharp drop in overall wholesale prices over the last four months.

PRESIDENT FORD'S press secretary, Ron Nessen, called the report by the Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Labor Statistics "excellent news" and "further evidence that the President's economic policy is working."

But he said, "At the same time I think we all feel a sense of caution. It will be difficult to have such a small increase each month."

The February figures showed that gasoline prices declined while charges for consumer services rose, although at a slower rate than in January.

Prices for some food, notably coffee, increased in February. Restaurant and quick-service meals increased at the same 0.8 per cent rate registered in January.

NONFOOD commodities increased 0.3 per cent, and clothing prices rose moderately.

Judge tells Hearst jury to 'pace' deliberations

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A jury Friday was given the task of deciding whether newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst acted of her own free will when she went into a bank with a gun and helped rob it of $10,690.

The case went to the jurors at 10:48 a.m. after legal instructions by U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The jurors deliberated for five hours and 15 minutes before adjourning for the night just before 5 p.m. They will resume at 9 a.m. Saturday.

In instructing the jurors, Carter told them to pace themselves so they did not become exhausted during the deliberations.

He ordered them to deliberate between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., including Saturday and Sunday, but said he would consider requests from them to continue their discussions into the evening if they wish.

In his instructions, Carter made these main points:

• It is up to the government to prove Miss Hearst is guilty.

"The presumption of innocence

alone is enough to acquit. The burden is always on the prosecution. It never shifts to the defendant."

• The key question is whether she acted under coercion and duress. If the jury determines that to be the case "You should acquit the accused."

• To bring in a guilty verdict the jury must decide that she is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, which he said must be "a doubt based on reason and common sense."

• The panel can consider the fact that Miss Hearst took the Fifth Amendment 42 times in determining her credibility. But he said they must judge her credibility in the same manner they weigh the testimony of other witnesses.

• Her intentional flight following the robbery is not sufficient proof for a conviction but neither is the fact of her original kidnapping sufficient to prove her innocence.

• The jury should ignore the punishment she will face if found guilty.

Contested races dominate April 10 school elections

All but two school districts in the Northwest suburbs will have contested board-of-education elections April 10 — making 1976 one of the most active election years for schools in recent years.

Both community college districts and all four area high school districts became contested Friday, the last day for the filing of nominating petitions.

Only Des Plaines Dist. 63, which serves central Des Plaines, and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, which serves Prospect Heights and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, will have uncontested elementary school elections.

School closings, teacher cutbacks, enrollment declines and financial deficits have been topics for discussion in most local school districts this year. These and other issues have prompted a number of candidacies.

The following names will appear on the ballot in April:

- Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 18: Incumbent Irene Sjostedt of Hoffman Estates and newcomer E. Erie Jones of Palatine, for one 1-year unexpired seat; incumbent Leland Gibbs of Rolling Meadows and newcomers

Patsy Kelly, Ann Koiler and Norman Knapp, all of Palatine, for two 3-year seats.

- Wheeling-Elmhurst Dist. 21: Incumbents Barbara Farr and Kenneth Rodeck, of Wheeling, and Steven Greenberg of Arlington Heights and newcomers Elaine Bond, Fred Harms, Linda Sprechman, all of Arlington Heights, James Gallagher of Wheeling and Barbara Floyd of Buffalo Grove, for three 3-year seats.

and newcomers Leslie Kleiman, Nick Rizzo, Norman Katz, all of Hoffman Estates, Mary Lund, Claudia Bartholomew, Isolde Smith, Dennis Watts, all of Schaumburg, Arlene Czajkowski of Roselle, Elizabeth Carpenter of Hanover Park, for three 3-year terms. Newcomer John Morrow of Hoffman Estates filed incomplete candidate papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

- Mount Prospect Dist. 57: Incumbents Martha Rotelli, David Kludal, and Peter Olesen and newcomers George Montalbano and Eugene Bradtkie, all of Mount Prospect, for three, 3-year terms.
- Elk Grove Township Dist. 59: Incumbents Emil Bahmaier of Mount Prospect, Judith Zanca of Des Plaines and Erwin Poklacki of Arlington Heights; and newcomer Charles B. Canupp Jr. of Elk Grove Village, for three 3-year terms.

Arrests near in theft ring probe: IBI

State and federal investigators Friday said they are closing in on an organized theft ring that specializes in stealing trucks and heavy equipment in the Chicago and St. Louis areas.

Thefts connected to the ring have occurred in the Schaumburg, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Libertyville, Mundelein and Addison areas, investigators said.

The arrests of as many as six persons are expected soon, said William Enlow, assistant to Wayne Kerstetter, director of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation.

ENLOW SAID the IBI began the investigation after several firms in the suburban Chicago area reported losing "thousands of dollars worth of heavy equipment weekly to what is believed to be an organized ring of thefts."

An informant supplied information to the bureau on the identity of the thieves, he said.

Enlow declined to identify the area owners, but said most were gravel companies and firms that use heavy semi-trailer and dump trucks.

During January and February, agents followed leads that led to the recovery of a stolen dump truck and semi-tractor near Lake Bluff.

BOTH VEHICLES were stolen from the St. Louis area, he said. The investigation shifted there for a while and St. Louis authorities were brought into the case, Enlow said.

The FBI also joined the probe, he said, when it became clear the case involved interstate transportation of stolen vehicles.

Also found in the St. Louis area were four more vehicles that had been stolen from firms in the North and Northwestern suburbs of Chicago, he said.

A total of $120,000 in heavy equipment has been recovered by investigators.

One of the first things Joseph Streizishar did when he stepped onto the ground Jan. 5 after living 36 days atop a pole to raise funds to fight muscular dystrophy was to surprise Linda Bernice Diener with an engagement ring.

Although Joe spent both the Christmas and New Year holidays on the pole, Valentine's Day found him repeating marriage vows with Linda before a

by JILL BETTNER

For almost 80 years, housewives on a budget, teen-agers on an allowance, new brides and the thrifty everywhere have been patiently licking billions of S&H Green Stamps, pasting them into books and saving, saving, saving.

Saving for a new can opener (4½ books), a hair dryer (5½ books) or some other appliance. Saving for a tennis racket (9 books), a set of golf clubs (22½ books) and even luxury items such as a raccoon coat (433 books) or a mini-motor home (4,198 books).

Anybody who has stopped saving the stamps for himself almost certainly is still saving for a friend or relative. Those of us who grew up in families where green stamps were considered almost as valuable as greenbacks wouldn't think of throwing them away — not even the mess all stuck together in the bottom of a kitchen drawer.

Everyone has enough green stamps lying around the house somewhere to fill at least one book despite the number of active savers (or at least redeemers) declining in recent years. Many stores just have stopped giving them away.

IT USED TO BE that many families planned nearly all their purchases around who gave green stamps, buying groceries at a certain store each week, getting gas at a special station and even arranging Saturday night bowling dates at "Green Stamp alleys."

In the last several years, however, businesses of all types quit offering the stamps for one reason or another.

Some dropped them to save the license fee S&H charged to use the stamps. Others simply decided to use the money they would have paid to S&H for other kinds of advertising and promotion.

One by one, National Tea Co. and other major food chain stores in the Chicago area dropped the stamps. Wieboldt's was the only one left where shoppers could still get a few of the once-mighty stamps with their change — until this year.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE of January, Wieboldt officials announced that they, too, would cease issuing the stamps and operating redemption centers in their 13 Chicago-area stores. Wieboldt's had participated in the S&H merchandising program since 1957.

Green stamps were no longer doing the job for Wieboldt's they were supposed to do, according to Arthur Muenze, president of Wieboldt Stores Inc.

"Since all food stores, most gas stations and other businesses had stopped giving the stamps away, public interest had declined to such an extent that offering them no longer was an effective method of bringing people into our stores," he said.

The redemption center in the basement of the Wieboldt's store

at Randhurst Shopping Center, Mount Prospect, will close permanently March 31. The other North suburban center, in the Wieboldt's store in Evanston also will close on that date.

AS OF APRIL 1, green stamp savers in this area will have to travel to Elmwood Park to exchange their books of stamps for merchandise.

The Elmwood Park store, to be located at 7216 W. Grand Ave., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. The store, plus another center opening the same day in Chicago, are the first of several planned by the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. to fill the void created by Wieboldt's decision to close its centers.

An S&H spokesman said it still is impossible to say whether any future centers will be located in the Northwest suburbs. He said the additional redemption facilities will be announced "as fast as locations can be selected and leases negotiated."

THE COMPANY is concerned that some savers in this area appear to be under the mistaken impression that because Wieboldt stores are closing redemption cen-

A breath of spring, a bit early

It was a day for catching sunbeams, Friday, March 19, 1976.

If you're 5 years old and in kindergarten, you were running your winter-weary heart out on the school playground. Spring fever hits hardest on the young.

"I hope tomorrow will be summer," one child said. "I want to ride my two-wheeler," called back another.

The Northwest suburbs thumbed its nose at the next-to-last official day of winter Friday. Warm southwesterly winds pushed the temperature to the mid-70s by afternoon. The sun was a little friendlier, the sky a little higher.

The men who study these things said the warm weather will fade over the weekend. More clouds and maybe a shower are part of the picture, too.

Officially, Friday's high temperature of 75 degrees felt short of the record 78 for the date set in 1921. But that only mattered to bookkeepers.

For everybody else, Friday's weather was a first-place finish for winter and a welcome harbinger of spring.

'Morale high,' says Lawler

by JERRY THOMAS

Rolling Meadows' firemen are pleased with the council's preliminary approval of 5 per cent pay raises for full time and a 50 per cent pay increase for volunteers, Joe Lawler, spokesman for the Professional Fire Fighters Assn., said Friday.

"Morale is high and the firemen feel good that the council and Mayor Roland J. Meyer supported our requests and the volunteers' requests for raises and other benefits," Lawler said.

"This is the first year the officials have allowed us to present our requests directly to the council, and we are really pleased at how they not only listened but heard what we were saying," Lawler said.

The 18 full-time firemen had requested 10 per cent raises.

In addition to the raises, full-timers are expected to receive time-and-a-half pay while attending mandatory fire-fighting schools.

OTHER ADDITIONAL benefits for full-time firemen include the right to accumulate unlimited sick leave, which may be collected at a half-pay rate at retirement. The department now allows six sick days a year with no accumulation.

Although the council denied requests for increased vacation days and longevity pay, it did agree to grant the department two Kelly days off a year in addition to regular holidays. "A Kelly day is not a floating holiday, as some describe it, but just a fireman's word to describe compensatory time off for working an average 56-hour week," Lawler said.

Lawler said when the department operated as a district before becoming a city department, firemen had one Kelly day a year.

"This was taken away when we became a city department and we are very pleased to see it back," he said.

"IT WAS GOOD to see smiling faces Friday," Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty said.

Fogarty described the Thursday budget hearing between firemen and city officials as "a good meeting for both of us. They (the council) considered our requests and granted those they thought to be fair."

Fogarty said he was especially pleased that the council granted $500 to $1,000 paramedic incentive pay to both full-time and paid on-call firemen who act as paramedics.

"Volunteers who train as paramedics work as hard as our full-timers to attain certification and must participate in runs to maintain their certifications," Fogarty said.

"I SEE NO difference between their

February food costs drop sharply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices increased at the lowest rate in four years during February as food costs took their sharpest drop since 1966, the Labor Dept. reported Friday.

The 0.1 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index compared to 0.4 per cent in January and a 0.6 per cent average for the last quarter of last year.

This put the index at 167.1, before seasonal adjustment, meaning that goods costing $100 in the 1967 base year went for $167.10 in February.

The February increase was the smallest since September 1971, the department said, and the 1.0 per cent drop in over-all food prices was the biggest downturn since 1956. Foods sold in grocery stores declined in price by 1.5 per cent, compared to a 0.4 per cent drop the previous month.

The February figures bore out predictions by administration economists that inflation would continue easing during the early months of this year, reflecting lower food costs and gradual effects of a sharp drop in overall wholesale prices over the last four months.

PRESIDENT FORD's press secretary, Ron Nessen, called the report by the Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Labor Statistics "excellent news" and "further evidence that the President's economic policy is working."

But he said, "At the same time I think we all feel a sense of caution. It will be difficult to have such a small increase each month."

The February figures showed that gasoline prices declined while charges for consumer services rose, although at a slower rate than in January.

Prices for some food, notably coffee, increased in February. Restaurant and quick-service meals increased at the same 0.8 per cent rate registered in January.

NONFOOD commodities increased 0.3 per cent, and clothing prices rose moderately.

Judge tells Hearst jury to 'pace' deliberations

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A jury Friday was given the task of deciding whether newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst acted of her own free will when she went into a bank with a gun and helped rob it of $10,500.

The case went to the jurors at 10:48 a.m. after legal instructions by U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The jurors, deliberated for five hours and 15 minutes before adjourning for the night just before 5 p.m. They will resume at 9 a.m. Saturday.

In instructing the jurors, Carter told them to pace themselves so they did not become exhausted during the deliberations.

He ordered them to deliberate between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., including Saturday and Sunday, but said he would consider requests from them to continue their discussions into the evening if they wish.

In his instructions, Carter made these main points:

• It is up to the government to prove Miss Hearst is guilty.

• "The presumption of innocence

alone is enough to acquit. The burden is always on the prosecution. It never shifts to the defendant."

• The key question is whether she acted under coercion and duress. If the jury determines that to be the case "You should acquit the accused."

• To bring in a guilty verdict the jury must decide that she is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, which he said must be "a doubt based on reason and common sense."

• The panel can consider the fact that Miss Hearst took the Fifth Amendment 42 times in determining her credibility. But he said they must judge her credibility in the same manner they weigh the testimony of other witnesses.

• Her intentional flight following the robbery is not sufficient proof for a conviction but neither is the fact of her original kidnapping sufficient to prove her innocence.

• The jury should ignore the punishment she will face if found guilty.

A good day for riding in the woods

THE WARM breeze and sunny day provided the incentive for a trek through Potawatomi Woods near Wheeling Friday for an unidentified rider and her horse. Cooler and cloudy weather is expected this weekend.

SLIDING INTO spring, kindergarten students shed their coats on the playground Friday.

Most school races contested

All but two school districts in the Northwest suburbs will have contested board-of-education elections April 10 — making 1976 one of the most active election years for schools in recent years.

Both community college districts and all four area high school districts became contested Friday, the last day for the filing of nominating petitions.

Only Des Plaines Dist. 62, which serves central Des Plaines, and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, which serves Prospect Heights and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, will have uncontested elementary school elections.

State panel OKs July 4th race card

by JOE SWICKARD

One day of Sunday racing for Arlington Park Race Track was approved unanimously Friday by the Illinois Racing Board.

The date, July 4, will be the only day of Sunday racing at the track.

The racing board's action echoes earlier action taken by the Arlington Heights Village Board this month in approving the holiday racing card.

The village board approved the one Sunday date in a series of unusual parliamentary procedures spanning two meetings.

AT THE FIRST hearing Feb. 16, the Sunday racing date was denied in three different motions. Trustees at that time expressed concern that approval of the request would set a precedent for demands for future Sunday dates. More than 20 residents also objected to the request because of concern about heavy traffic that is generated by the racetrack.

Trustee Alfred Barbora, who cast the decisive vote on the three motions, said the track would have to show a stronger tie-in with the village's Bicentennial celebration to receive the July 4 date.

At the next session of the village board March 2, track officials proposed a program that included a nine-race card, parades, music, picnic areas and fireworks displays. The featured July 4 race, the $100,000-to-$150,000-added American Derby, is the subject of negotiations between Arlington Park and CBS for national television broadcasting rights.

IN THEIR APPEARANCE before the village board, track officials said they would not seek any other Sunday racing dates, which are being allowed for the first time under revised state racing laws. The revised statutes require tracks to get local approval for Sunday racing either through municipal government action or by popular referendum.

Following the track officials' presentation of the proposed Bicentennial program, the village board approved the Sunday application. No objectors appeared at the board's second meeting to hear the request.

The village is expected to receive more than $3,500 from the single day of racing through the new 10-cent-per-person admission tax, which also was made part of the revised state racing laws.

The state racing board's action Friday formalizes the village board's approval for the July 4 date.

Arrests near in truck theft ring probe: IBI

State and federal investigators Friday said they are closing in on an organized theft ring that specializes in stealing trucks and heavy equipment in the Chicago and St. Louis areas.

Thefts connected to the ring have occurred in the Schaumburg, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Libertyville, Mundelein and Addison areas, investigators said.

The arrests of as many as six persons are expected soon, said William Enlow, assistant to Wayne Kerstetter, director of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation.

ENLOW SAID the IBI began the investigation after several firms in the suburban Chicago area reported losing "thousands of dollars worth of heavy equipment weekly to what is believed to be an organized ring of thieves."

An informant supplied information to the bureau on the identity of the thieves, he said.

Enlow declined to identify the area owners, but said most were gravel companies and firms that use heavy semi-trailer and dump trucks.

Firemen pleased with pay increase

(Continued from Page 1) dedication and the full-timers and am glad they also will receive the incentive pay," he said.

Paramedics also will receive time-and-a-half-pay while attending paramedic schools.

The city's 25 volunteers currently are paid $5 an hour. When the raises are effective they will receive $7.50 per hour for a one-hour fire call or $5 per hour for calls of two hours or more. In addition, they will receive an increase from $16 a night to $24 a night for evening duty.

Although the full city council was present at the special city council budget meeting, all the increases and recommendations are subject to the approval of the city's 1976-77 budget.

During January and February, agents followed leads that led to the recovery of a stolen dump truck and semi-tractor near Lake Bluff.

BOTH VEHICLES were stolen from the St. Louis area, he said. The investigation shifted there for a while and St. Louis authorities were brought into the case, Enlow said.

The FBI also joined the probe, he said, when it became clear the case involved interstate transportation of stolen vehicles.

Also found in the St. Louis area were four more vehicles that had been stolen from firms in the North and Northwestern suburbs of Chicago, he said.

A total of $120,000 in heavy equipment has been recovered by investigators.

"Our stamps are still good and there is no need for consumer alarm," said Richard Reynolds, S&H vice president and regional manager. "We've been in business for 80 years and we've never failed to redeem a stamp."

Even though the major retail outlets in the Chicago area have stopped offering the stamps, there are still a number of small businesses in the Northwest suburbs, particularly service stations, that make them available to customers.

One auto dealer, Cass Ford Inc., Des Plaines, sometimes uses the stamps as a special promotional gimmick. Owner Jim Cass offers two big books of 5,000 stamps each with the purchase of a new car on certain days throughout the year.

"WE DON'T DO IT all the time, but when we do, it seems to help our sales," Cass said. "People still seem to be interested in green stamps."

In all, there are 545 retailers currently giving S&H Green Stamps in Illinois. More than 200 are service stations; 40 drug stores; 36 bowling alleys and 34 food stores. Of the 450 redemption centers in the United States, eight are in Illinois.

At the Randhurst Wieboldt's store last week, the redemption center was crowded with savers, some of whom had brought in armloads of books. It was getting down to slim pickings, but shoppers searched the shelves for items that might be used at home before turning to the long "cash only" lines.

"They're only giving $2 a book, and I really think they're worth more if you get something with them," a Park Ridge woman said.

"I've been saving these stamps for years and believe me, they've come in handy a lot of times. It's too bad they're closing down here. I come here to shop anyway, and it was always so convenient to just bring my stamps along."

"Hardly anybody gives stamps anymore — not like they used to when I was first married 30 years ago," a woman from Morton Grove remarked. "Now it's all cash or credit cards. Maybe green stamps are just part of a passing age."

Stamp saving becoming unstuck

by JILL BETTNER

For almost 80 years, housewives on a budget, teen-agers on an allowance, new brides and the thrifty everywhere have been patiently licking billions of S&H Green Stamps, pasting them into books and saving, saving, saving.

Saving for a new can opener (4½ books), a hair dryer (5½ books) or some other appliance. Saving for a tennis racket (9 books), a set of golf clubs (22½ books) and even luxury items such as a raccoon coat (433 books) or a mini-motor home (4,198 books).

Anybody who has stopped saving the stamps for himself almost certainly is still saving for a friend or relative. Those of us who grew up in families where green stamps were considered almost as valuable as greenbacks wouldn't think of throwing them away—not even the mess all stuck together in the bottom of a kitchen drawer.

Everyone has enough green stamps lying around the house somewhere to fill at least one book despite the number of active savers (or at least redeemers) declining in recent years. Many stores just have stopped giving them away.

IT USED TO BE that many families planned nearly all their purchases around who gave green stamps, buying groceries at a certain store each week, getting gas at a special station and even arranging Saturday night bowling dates at "Green Stamp alleys."

In the last several years, however, businesses of all types quit offering the stamps for one reason or another.

Some dropped them to save the license fee S&H charged to use the stamps. Others, simply decided to use the money they would have paid to S&H for other kinds of advertising and promotion.

One by one, National Tea Co. and other major food chain stores in the Chicago area dropped the stamps. Wieboldt's was the only one left where shoppers could still get a few of the once-mighty stamps with their change—until this year.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE of January, Wieboldt officials announced that they, too, would cease issuing the stamps and operating redemption centers in their 13 Chicago-area stores. Wieboldt's had participated in the S&H merchandising program since 1957.

Green stamps were no longer doing the job for Wieboldt's they were supposed to do, according to Arthur Muenze, president of Wieboldt Stores Inc.

"Since all food stores, most gas stations and other businesses had stopped giving the stamps away, public interest had declined to such an extent that offering them no longer was an effective method of bringing people into our stores," he said.

The redemption center in the basement of the Wieboldt's store

at Randhurst Shopping Center, Mount Prospect, will close permanently March 31. The other North suburban center, in the Wieboldt's store in Evanston also will close on that date.

AS OF APRIL 1, green stamp savers in this area will have to travel to Elmwood Park to exchange their books of stamps for merchandise.

The Elmwood Park store, to be located at 7216 W. Grand Ave., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. The store, plus another center opening the same day in Chicago, are the first of several planned by the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. to fill the void created by Wieboldt's decision to close its centers.

An S&H spokesman said it still is impossible to say whether any future centers will be located in the Northwest suburbs. He said the additional redemption facilities will be announced "as fast as locations can be selected and leases negotiated."

THE COMPANY is concerned that some savers in this area appear to be under the mistaken impression that because Wieboldt stores are closing redemption cen-

Are green stamps licked?

A breath of spring, a bit early

It was a day for catching sunbeams, Friday, March 19, 1976.

If you're 5 years old and in kindergarten, you were running your winter-weary heart out on the school playground. Spring fever hits hardest on the young.

"I hope tomorrow will be summer," one child said. "I want to ride my two-wheeler," called back another.

The Northwest suburbs thumbed its nose at the next-to-last official day of winter Friday. Warm southwesterly winds pushed the temperature to the mid-70s by afternoon. The sun was a little friendlier, the sky a little higher.

The men who study these things said the warm weather will fade over the weekend. More clouds and maybe a shower are part of the picture, too.

Officially, Friday's high temperature of 75 degrees fell short of the record 78 for the date set in 1921. But that only mattered to bookkeepers.

For everybody else, Friday's weather was a first-place finish for winter and a welcome harbinger of spring.

State board acts

by JOE SWICKARD

One day of Sunday racing for Arlington Park Race Track was approved unanimously Friday by the Illinois Racing Board.

The date, July 4, will be the only day of Sunday racing at the track.

The racing board's action echoes earlier action taken by the Arlington Heights Village Board this month in approving the holiday racing card.

The village board approved the one Sunday date in a series of unusual parliamentary procedures spanning two meetings.

AT THE FIRST hearing Feb. 16, the

Sunday racing date was denied in three different motions. Trustees at that time expressed concern that approval of the request would set a precedent for demands for future Sunday dates. More than 20 residents also objected to the request because of concern about heavy traffic that is generated by the racetrack.

Trustee Alfred Barboro, who cast the decisive vote on the three motions, said the track would have to show a stronger tie-in with the village's Bicentennial celebration to receive the July 4 date.

At the next session of the village board March 2, track officials proposed a program that included a nine-race card, parades, music, picnic areas and fireworks displays. The featured July 4 race, the $100,000-to-$150,000-added American Derby, is the subject of negotiations between Arlington Park and CBS for national television broadcasting rights.

IN THEIR APPEARANCE before the village board, track officials said they would not seek any other Sunday racing dates, which are being allowed for the first time under revised state racing laws. The revised statutes require tracks to get local approval for Sunday racing either through municipal government action or by popular referendum.

Following the track officials' presentation of the proposed Bicentennial program, the village board approved the Sunday application. No objectors appeared at the board's second meeting to hear the request.

The village is expected to receive more than $3,500 from the single day of racing through the new 10-cent-per-person admission tax, which also was made part of the revised state racing laws.

The state racing board's action Friday formalizes the village board's approval for the July 4 date.

February food costs drop sharply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices increased at the lowest rate in four years during February as food costs took their sharpest drop since 1966, the Labor Dept. reported Friday.

The 0.1 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index compared to 0.4 per cent in January and a 0.6 per cent average for the last quarter of last year.

This put the index at 167.1, before seasonal adjustment, meaning that goods costing $100 in the 1967 base year went for $167.10 in February.

The February increase was the smallest since September 1971, the department said, and the 1.0 per cent drop in over-all food prices was the biggest downturn since 1966. Foods sold in grocery stores declined in price by 1.5 per cent, compared to a 0.4 per cent drop the previous month.

The February figures bore out predictions by administration economists that inflation would continue easing during the early months of this year, reflecting lower food costs and gradual effects of a sharp drop in overall wholesale prices over the last four months.

PRESIDENT FORD's press secretary, Ron Nessen, called the report by the Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Labor Statistics "excellent news" and "further evidence that the President's economic policy is working."

But he said, "At the same time I think we all feel a sense of caution. It will be difficult to have such a small increase each month."

The February figures showed that gasoline prices declined while charges for consumer services rose, although at a slower rate than in January.

Prices for some food, notably coffee, increased in February. Restaurant and quick-service meals increased at the same 0.8 per cent rate registered in January.

NONFOOD commodities increased 0.3 per cent, and clothing prices rose moderately.

Judge tells Hearst jury to 'pace' deliberations

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A jury Friday was given the task of deciding whether newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst acted of her own free will when she went into a bank with a gun and helped rob it of $10,690.

The case went to the jurors at 10:48 a.m. after legal instructions by U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The jurors deliberated for five hours and 16 minutes before adjourning for the night just before 5 p.m. They will resume at 9 a.m. Saturday.

In instructing the jurors, Carter told them to pace themselves so they did not become exhausted during the deliberations.

He ordered them to deliberate between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., including Saturday and Sunday, but said he would consider requests from them to continue their discussions into the evening if they wish.

In his instructions, Carter made these main points:

- It is up to the government to prove Miss Hearst is guilty.
- The presumption of innocence

alone is enough to acquit. The burden is always on the prosecution. It never shifts to the defendant."

- The key question is whether she acted under coercion and duress. If the jury determines that to be the case "You should acquit the accused."

- To bring in a guilty verdict the jury must decide that she is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, which he said must be "a doubt based on reason and common sense."

- The panel can consider the fact that Miss Hearst took the Fifth Amendment 42 times in determining her credibility. But he said they must judge her credibility in the same manner they weigh the testimony of other witnesses.

- Her intentional flight following the robbery is not sufficient proof for a conviction but neither is the fact of her original kidnapping sufficient to prove her innocence.

- The jury should ignore the punishment she will face if found guilty.

A good day for riding in the woods

THE WARM breeze and sunny day provided the incentive for a trek through Potawatomi Woods near Wheeling Friday for an unidentified rider and her horse. Cooler and cloudy weather is expected this weekend.

SLIDING INTO spring, kindergarten students shed their coats on the playground Friday.

In April elections

Most school races contested

All but two school districts in the Northwest suburbs will have contested board-of-education elections April 10 — making 1976 one of the most active election years for schools in recent years.

Both community college districts and all four area high school districts became contested Friday, the last day for the filing of nominating petitions.

Only Des Plaines Dist. 62, which serves central Des Plaines, and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, which serves Prospect Heights and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, will have uncontested elementary school elections.

School closings, teacher cutbacks, enrollment declines and financial deficits have been topics for discussion in most local school districts this year. These and other issues have prompted a number of candidacies.

The following names will appear on the ballot in April:

• Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15: Incumbent Irene Sjostedt of Hoffman Estates and newcomer E. Eric Jones of Palatine, for one 1-year unexpired seat; incumbent Leland Gibbs of Rolling Meadows and newcomers Patsy Kelly, Ann Koller and Norman Knapp, all of Palatine, for two 3-year seats.

• Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21: Incumbents Barbara Farr and Kenneth Rodeck, of Wheeling, and Steven Greenberg of Arlington Heights and newcomers Elaine Bond, Fred Harms, Linda Sprichman, all of Arlington Heights, James Gallagher of Wheeling and Barbara Floyd of Buffalo Grove, for three 3-year seats.

• Prospect Heights Dist. 23: Incumbents Sallyann Okuno of Prospect Heights and Alan Krinsky of Arlington Heights, for two 3-year seats.

• Arlington Heights Dist. 25: Incumbents Edith Jelly, Donald Gibbins of Arlington Heights and newcomers James Foster, Douglas Chidley, both of Arlington Heights, and Sharon Wanner of Mount Prospect, for three, 3-year terms.

• River Trails Dist. 26: Incumbents William Haase and Peggy Golden, and newcomer Patrick Faucella, all of Mount Prospect, for two 3-year seats.

• Schaumburg Township Dist. 54: Incumbents Edward Bedard and Gordon Thoren, both of Hoffman Estates, and newcomers Leslie Kleinman, Nick Rizzo, Norman Katz, all of Hoffman Estates, Mary Lund, Claudia Bartholomew, Isolda Smith, Dennis Watts, all of Schaumburg, Arlene Czajkowski of Roselle, Elizabeth Carpenter of Hanover Park, for three 3-year terms. Newcomer John Morrow of Hoffman Estates filed incomplete candidacy papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

• Mount Prospect Dist. 57: Incumbents Martha Rotelli, David Kluxdal, and Peter Olesen and newcomers George Montalbano and Eugene Bradtke, all of Mount Prospect, for three, 3-year terms.

• Elk Grove Township Dist. 59: Incumbents Emil Bahnmaier of Mount Prospect, Judith Zanca of Des Plaines and Erwin Poklacki of Arlington Heights; and newcomer Charles B. Canupp Jr. of Elk Grove Village, for three 3-year terms.

• Des Plaines Dist. 62: Incumbent Richard Birchfield and newcomer James N. Kosmond, both of Des Plaines, for two 3-year terms.

• East Moline Dist. 63: Incumbent Larry Reiss of Morton Grove, and newcomers Roberta Morris of Park Ridge, Ann Sostrin of Morton Grove, Richard Smith of Niles, and Jeanenne Oestreich of Morton Grove, for three 3-year terms.

• Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96: Incumbents Clarke Walser and Linaya Back, both of Buffalo Grove, Louis Lundstedt Jr. of Long Grove and newcomer William G. Papke Jr. of Buffalo Grove, for three, 3-year terms. Newcomers Wayne R. Banasik and Jerry R. Parkin, both of Buffalo Grove, for one, 1-year term.

• High School Dist. 125: Incumbent Edward Smith of Buffalo Grove and newcomers Brenda B. Weis and Larry Managuth both of Lincolnshire, Conrad Thorne of Buffalo Grove, Francis L. Wolowic and Lorenz C. Schmidt, both of Mundelein for two 3-year terms. Newcomer Charles J. Klinger of Lincolnshire, filed incomplete candidacy papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

• High School Dist. 207: Incumbents Anne Evans of Des Plaines and Roy Makela of Niles; and newcomers Arlynn Warmack of Morton Grove, Thomas Rueckert of Glenview and Earl Wilson of Niles, for three 3-year terms.

• High School Dist. 211: Incumbent Robert Creek of Inverness; and newcomers Richard Gillette and Glenn Hargrave, both of Palatine, for two 3-year terms.

• High School Dist. 214: Incumbents Donald Hoeck of Arlington Heights and John Costello of Mount Prospect, and newcomers Gayatri P. Tewari of Des Plaines and Marilyn M. Quinn of Elk Grove Village, for three 3-year terms.

• Harper College: Incumbents Shirley Munson of Palatine and Jessalyn Nicklas, both of Inverness, and newcomers Stephen Carponelli of Arlington Heights and David Tomchek of Barrington, for two 3-year seats.

• Oakton Community College: Incumbents Raymond Hartstein of Skokie, Paul Gilson of Skokie and Thomas Flynn of Niles, and newcomers John J. Prochaska III of Park Ridge, Janet Juckett of Park Ridge, Stanley Harris of Lincolnwood, Bruce M. Friedman of Lincolnwood and Ira Charles Feldman of Des Plaines, for three 3-year terms.

Village budget to go public Sunday

Palatine officials will get their first look at the proposed 1976-77 budget at a meeting at 1 p.m. Sunday at the village hall, 54 S. Brockway St.

Although figures for the budget have not been released, officials have said the budget is austere and will require no tax increase.

The budget apparently provides for hiring no additional staff except where commitments have been made in the fire department. The budget will include provisions for salary increases for most village employees.

VILLAGE MGR. ANTON H. Harwig has been meeting with village department heads for the past two months to formulate the budget. Harwig set a 6 per cent growth limit over 1975-76 budget figures as a target for department heads.

The board already has approved a resolution calling for an economy-minded, balanced budget based on projections which forecast a $728,833 increase in revenues. An expected increase in sales tax accounts for a substantial portion of the projected revenue increase, officials have said.

Sunday's meeting will be the first of three scheduled by the board. Other budget review sessions will be March 29 and April 11. The budget must be approved by April 28 to take effect with the start of the new fiscal year May 1.

The 1975-76 budget was a record $7.2 million. It provided for hiring no additional staff and a freeze on capital purchases.

Arrests near in truck theft ring probe: IBI

State and federal investigators Friday said they are closing in on an organized theft ring that specializes in stealing trucks and heavy equipment in the Chicago and St. Louis areas.

Thefts connected to the ring have occurred in the Schaumburg, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Libertyville, Mundelein, and Addison areas, investigators said.

The arrests of as many as six persons are expected soon, said William Enlow, assistant to Wayne Kerstetter, director of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation.

Also found in the St. Louis area were four more vehicles that had been stolen from firms in the North and Northwestern suburbs of Chicago, he said.

A total of $120,000 in heavy equipment has been recovered by investigators.

ters, it's either "now or never" for redeeming green stamps.

"Our stamps are still good and there is no need for consumer alarm," said Richard Reynolds, S&H vice president and regional manager. "We've been in business for 80 years and we've never failed to redeem a stamp."

Even though the major retail outlets in the Chicago area have stopped offering the stamps, there are still a number of small businesses in the Northwest suburbs, particularly service stations, that make them available to customers.

One auto dealer, Cass Ford Inc., Des Plaines, sometimes uses the stamps as a special promotional gimmick. Owner Jim Cass offers two big books of 3,000 stamps each with the purchase of a new car on certain days throughout the year.

"WE DON'T DO IT all the time, but when we do, it seems to help our sales," Cass said. "People still seem to be interested in green stamps."

In all, there are 545 retailers currently giving S&H Green Stamps in Illinois. More than 200 are service stations; 40 drug stores; 35 bowling alleys and 34 food stores. Of the 450 redemption centers in the United States, eight are in Illinois.

At the Randhurst Wieboldt's store last week, the redemption center was crowded with savers, some of whom had brought in armloads of books. It was getting down to slim pickings, but shoppers searched the shelves for items that might be used at home before turning to the long "cash only" lines.

"They're only giving $2 a book, and I really think they're worth more if you get something with them," a Park Ridge woman said.

"I've been saving these stamps for years and believe me, they've come in handy a lot of times. It's too bad they're closing down here. I come here to shop anyway, and it was always so convenient to just bring my stamps along."

$300,000 problem

Meeting on library costs

Mount Prospect village and library officials will meet today to discuss ways of paying for an estimated $300,000 in extra costs for the new public library.

Officials are expecting additional expenses on the $3.2 million library, under construction at Main Street and Central Road, because of last-minute modifications in building specifications required by the village.

The meeting, scheduled for 9 a.m. at the village hall, 100 S. Emerson St., will focus on how much will be needed to finish the library.

"Now that we've got the thing two-thirds completed, those things that before were only estimates now have become concrete," Mayor Robert D. Teichert said. "It is time to talk in terms of how the final cost works out — what they need, what they have and what they don't have."

In preparation for the meeting, John W. A. Parsons, library board president, has sent board members packets of information outlining library history and usage.

BOARD MEMBERS also are anxious to discuss the library's 1976-77 budget, but Teichert said this discussion may have to wait until the upcoming finance committee meeting March 25.

"I think the library board wants this meeting to talk about the completion of the facility," he said.

The library is scheduled to open this fall. Contracts have not yet been awarded for furniture or landscaping. The village board has postponed taking action on purchase of a computer and a vacuum system until it can review the library budget.

Construction is being financed with a $4 million bond issue approved by the village board in 1974. About $300,000 of the bond issue went to purchase the new village hall.

Cost overruns on the library occurred when the village required installation of a sprinkler system and enlarged heating and ventilation systems.

Several trustees have called for "belt-tightening" in both the new library and the library budget.

Parsons said he is confident all problems will be solved once the village board understands the situation.

Judge tells Hearst jury to 'pace' deliberations

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A jury Friday was given the task of deciding whether newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst acted of her own free will when she went into a bank with a gun and helped rob it of $10,690.

The case went to the jurors at 10:48 a.m. after legal instructions by U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The jurors deliberated for five hours and 15 minutes before adjourning for the night just before 5 p.m. They will resume at 9 a.m. Saturday.

In instructing the jurors, Carter told them to pace themselves so they did not become exhausted during the deliberations.

He ordered them to deliberate between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., including Saturday and Sunday, but said he would consider requests from them to continue their discussions into the evening if they wish.

In his instructions, Carter made these main points:

- It is up to the government to prove Miss Hearst is guilty.
- The presumption of innocence

alone is enough to acquit. The burden is always on the prosecution. It never shifts to the defendant.

- The key question is whether she acted under coercion and duress. If the jury determines that to be the case "You should acquit the accused."

- To bring in a guilty verdict the jury must decide that she is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, which he said must be "a doubt based on reason and common sense."

- The panel can consider the fact that Miss Hearst took the Fifth Amendment 42 times in determining her credibility. But he said they must judge her credibility in the same manner they weigh the testimony of other witnesses.

- Her intentional flight following the robbery is not sufficient proof for a conviction but neither is the fact of her original kidnapping sufficient to prove her innocence.

- The jury should ignore the punishment she will face if found guilty.

Contested races dominate April 10 school elections

All but two school districts in the Northwest suburbs will have contested board-of-education elections April 10 — making 1976 one of the most active election years for schools in recent years.

Both community college districts and all four area high school districts became contested Friday, the last day for the filing of nominating petitions.

Only Des Plaines Dist. 62, which serves central Des Plaines, and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, which serves Prospect Heights and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, will have uncontested elementary school elections.

School closings, teacher cutbacks, enrollment declines and financial deficits have been topics for discussion in most local school districts this year. These and other issues have prompted a number of candidacies.

The following names will appear on the ballot in April:

• Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist.

16: Incumbent Irene Sjöstedt of Hoffman Estates and newcomer E. Erie Jones of Palatine, for one 1-year unexpired seat; incumbent Leland Gibbs of Rolling Meadows and newcomers Patsy Kelly, Ann Koller and Norman Knapp, all of Palatine, for two 3-year seats.

• Wheeling-Elk Grove Dist. 21: Incumbents Barbara Farr and Kenneth Rodack, of Wheeling, and Steven Greenberg of Arlington Heights and newcomers Elaine Bond, Fred Harris, Linda Sprechman, all of Arlington Heights, James Gallagher of Wheeling and Barbara Floyd of Buffalo Grove, for three 3-year seats.

• Prospect Heights Dist. 23: incumbents Sallyann Okuno of Prospect Heights and Alan Krinsky of Arlington Heights, for two 3-year seats.

• Arlington Heights Dist. 25: Incumbents Edith Jolly, Donald Gibbins of Arlington Heights and newcomers James Foster, Douglas Chidley, both of Arlington Heights, and Sharon

Wanner of Mount Prospect, for three, 3-year terms.

• River Trails Dist. 26: Incumbents William Haase and Peggy Golden, and newcomer Patrick Fauceglia, all of Mount Prospect, for two 3-year seats.

• Schaumburg Township Dist. 54: Incumbents Edward Bedard and Gordon Thoren, both of Hoffman Estates, and newcomers Leslie Kleiman, Nick Rizzo, Norman Katz, all of Hoffman Estates, Mary Lund, Claudia Bartholomew, Iselde Smith, Dennis Watts, all of Schaumburg, Arlene Czajkowski of Roselle, Elizabeth Carpenter of Hanover Park, for three 3-year terms. Newcomer John Morrow of Hoffman Estates filed incomplete candidacy papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

• Mount Prospect Dist. 57: Incumbents Martha Rotelli, David Kluxdal, and Peter Olesen and newcomers George Montalbano and Eugene

Bradtke, all of Mount Prospect, for three, 3-year terms.

• Elk Grove Township Dist. 59: Incumbents Emil Bahmaier of Mount Prospect, Judith Zanca of Des Plaines and Erwin Poklaski of Arlington Heights; and newcomer Charles B. Canupp Jr. of Elk Grove Village, for three 3-year terms.

• Des Plaines Dist. 62: Incumbent Richard Birchfield and newcomer James N. Kosmond, both of Des Plaines, for two 3-year terms.

• East Maine Dist. 63: Incumbent Larry Reiss of Morton Grove and newcomers Roberta Morris of Park Ridge, Ann Sostrin of Morton Grove, Richard Smith of Niles, and Jeanenne Oestreich of Morton Grove, for three 3-year terms.

of Buffalo Grove, for three, 3-year terms. Newcomers Wayne R. Banasik and Jerry R. Parkin, both of Buffalo Grove, for one, 1-year term.

• High School Dist. 125: Incumbent Edward Smith of Buffalo Grove and newcomers Brenda B. Weis and Larry Manauagh both of Lincolnshire, Conrad Thorne of Buffalo Grove, Francis L. Wolowic and Lorenz C. Schmidt, both of Mundelein for two 3-year terms. Newcomer Charles J. Klinger of Lincolnshire, filed incomplete candidacy papers and his name will not appear on the ballot.

• High School Dist. 207: Incumbents Anne Evans of Des Plaines and Roy Makela of Niles; and newcomers Arlynn Warmack of Morton Grove, Thomas Rueckert of Glenview and Earl Wilson of Niles, for three 3-year terms.

• High School Dist. 211: Incumbent Robert Creek of Inverness; and newcomers Richard Gillette and Glenn

Hargrave, both of Palatine, for two 3-year terms.

• High School Dist. 214: Incumbents Donald Hoeck of Arlington Heights and John Costello of Mount Prospect, and newcomers Gayatri P. Tewari of Des Plaines and Marilyn M. Quinn of Elk Grove Village, for three 3-year terms.

• Oakton Community College: Incumbents Raymond Hartstein of Skokie, Paul Gilson of Skokie and Thomas Flynn of Niles, and newcomers John J. Prochaska III of Park Ridge, Janet Juckett of Park Ridge, Stanley Harris of Lincolnwood, Bruce M. Friedman of Lincolnwood and Ira Charles Feldman of Des Plaines, for three 3-year terms.

Dist. 23 drops plan to drop 1st-yr. teachers

by PAM BIGFORD

A resolution to fire all first-year teachers in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 has been defeated by the board of education, but the board will continue a discussion of budget cutbacks at a special meeting Wednesday.

The board split 3-3 over whether to notify first-year teachers that they would not be rehired next year. Board members Carl Poch, Dee Wells and Vince Battaglia voted yes, while Alan Krinsky, Sallyann Okuno and Melvin Lacey voted no. Ronald Sowatzke was absent. A tied motion is defeated.

Supt. Edward Grodsky said budget cutbacks are being considered because of a "combination" of the projected loss of "anywhere from 50 to 100 students" next year and uncertainty over whether the district will receive its anticipated amount of funding from the state.

Grodsky said the district showed a gain of about 35 students at the beginning of this school year, but have since lost about 30 students. The district has 1,697 students. He said a survey of the district shows that enrollment may decline by at least "another 30 or 40" by September.

The district has seven first-year teachers. Grodsky said that normally about 10 teachers resign at the end of each year, but that last year only six resigned. By law, teachers must be notified 60 days before the end of the school year if their contracts are not going to be renewed for the next year.

Grodsky said that if the first-year teachers are eventually fired, they will be given "first consideration" for openings that become available through resignations or through additional state funding. He said, however, that he does not anticipate "any new state funding" unless the formula for state aid changes to increase each district's funds.

The district presently has $490,000 in tax anticipation warrants, a method of borrowing against next year's tax revenue.

Grodsky said the board decided to continue the board meeting to next week to consider other budget reductions, but said there was no indication whether the board would again bring up firing the first-year teachers. He said the administration will present additional information on the financial condition of the district and that additional budget cuts will be considered during the meeting.

Grodsky said the regular meeting will be followed by a committee meeting to discuss the short- and long-range goals of the district.

Ten Maine East High School students were slightly injured Friday when two school buses collided on Rand Road near Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights.

The buses were returning to the area from a field trip to Whitewater, Wis., when the accident occurred.

Taken to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, were Lynn Cichon, 17, of 1053 Apple Creek Ln., Des Plaines and Richard Childs, 17, of 1628 Western, Park Ridge.

Also taken to the hospital were: Debra Zeimet, 18, of 8424 Crain, Patricia McEvilly, 17, of 8040 Overhill Ave., Cathy Surman, 17, of 8406 Clara Dr., Charlene Golbach, 17, of 8106

Elmore, Daryl Mirza, 16, of 7633 Churchill, Cynthia Luczak, 17, of 341 Ozanam, Dawn Banovitz, 16, of 8108 Prospect, and Terry Ptach, 17, of 6299 Oriole, all of Niles.

A hospital spokesman said all of the students were released after treatment for minor cuts and back and neck injuries.

Arlington Heights Patrolman William Kissane said one of the bus drivers told him the two buses were following each other eastbound on Rand Road when a truck in between them veered into another lane. The second bus then struck the one in front, which had stopped near the intersection.

At Randhurst Shopping Center

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Businessmen, senior citizens and housewives with restless children got a look at themselves from the inside out Friday at a health fair at Randhurst Shopping Center.

The shoppers milled around more than 40 health care and safety exhibits that comprise the annual fair, which continues until 4 p.m. today at the Mount Prospect shopping center.

The displays attracted the attention of area residents with large, colorful posters of the human body, technical equipment, photographs, movies and demonstrations. The exhibits focused on everything from cancer detection to safety.

"Look here, Mom," yelled one enthusiastic youngster, running toward a table with a life-like female mannequin. Mount Prospect paramedics were using the models to demonstrate the use of mouth-to-mouth and cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

SOME WOMEN looked on in virtual terror while others took up the offer to try the life-saving methods themselves.

"I don't think I could ever do that," one woman said.

"You would do it if you had to, if it meant saving another person's life. It's better than doing nothing at all," one of the paramedics said.

At another end of the mall, Holy Family Hospital technicians and nurses administered tests for blood pressure, blood type and lung condition.

More than 1,500 persons will be tested at Randhurst during the two-day health fair, said James McQuaid public relations director for the Des Plaines hospital.

Most of the residents who are tested are in "good health." The tests indicate abnormalities and determine whether further tests or a visit to the family physician should be pursued, he said.

"IT'S THE FREE screening that seems to be very popular with the people who come to these health fairs. When it's free, everyone is interested in their health. But, the concern for your health should really go beyond that, and that's what we are trying to stress here," McQuaid said.

Nearby, the Mount Prospect Lion's Club was giving free glaucoma testing to detect the eye disease that is common in older persons.

Senior citizens also found literature on health services available to them in the suburbs. The fair is sponsored by the Mount Prospect Junior Woman's Club and the Randhurst Merchants Assn.

"I need to sit down and rest a minute," one weary shopper said to another in front of an exhibit sponsored by the Illinois College of Podiatric Medicine.

"You came to the right place," said

one white-jacketed doctor who was giving free foot screenings.

THE MOUNT PROSPECT Police Dept. showed films on bicycle safety, while Northwest Community Hospital passed out cardboard "doctor's hats" to the children.

There was information on alcoholism, venereal disease, hay fever, heart attacks and abortion.

Most shoppers left the shopping center with a healthy collection of pamphlets and information.

"You know, I didn't realize that a lung test was as easy as blowing air into a tube. And that computer registered it and gave an answer," said one woman, walking out of the mall.

"I wasn't sick when I came in here, but somehow, I feel better," she said.

Stamp saving becoming unstuck

ters. It's either "new or never" for redeeming green stamps.

"Our stamps are still good and there is no need for consumer alarm," said Richard Reynolds, S&H vice president and regional manager. "We've been in business for 30 years and we've never failed to redeem a stamp."

Even though the major retail outlets in the Chicago area have stopped offering the stamps, there are still a number of small businesses in the Northwest suburbs, particularly service stations, that make them available to customers.

One auto dealer, Case Ford Inc., Des Plaines, sometimes uses the stamps as a special promotional gimmick. Owner Jim Case offers two big books of 8,000 stamps each with the purchase of a new car on certain days throughout the year.

"WE DON'T DO IT all the time, but when we do, it seems to help our sales," Case said. "People still seem to be interested in green stamps."

In all, there are 545 retailers currently giving S&H Green Stamps in Illinois. More than 200 are service stations; 40 drug stores; 36 bowling alleys and 34 food stores. Of the 498 redemption centers in the United States, eight are in Illinois.

At the Randhurst Wheelbit's store last week, the redemption center was crowded with savers, some of whom had brought in armloads of books. It was getting down to slim pickings, but shoppers searched the shelves for items that might be used at home before turning in the long "cash only" lines.

"They're only giving $2 a book, and I really think they're worth more if you get something with them," a Park Ridge woman said.

"I've been saving these stamps for years and believe me, they've come in handy a lot of times. It's too bad they're closing down here. I come here to shop anyway, and it was always so convenient to just bring my stamps along."

"Hardly anybody gives stamps anymore — not like they used to when I was first married 30 years ago," a woman from Morton Grove remarked. "Now it's all cash or credit cards. Maybe green stamps are just part of a passing age."
